The First Fight---Capture of Saarbruck by the French---A Two Hours' Contest---Napoleon Leads the Army---The Prince Imperial Under Fire.

PARIS, Aug. 2---Evening.---An official dispatch from Metz announces that today, at 11 o'clock in the morning, the French had a serious engagement with the Prussians. Our army took the offensive, crossed the frontier, and invaded the territory of Prussia. In spite of the numbers and position of the enemy, a few of our battalions were sufficient to carry the heights which overlook Saarbrück, and our artillery was not slow to drive the enemy from the town. The élan of our troops was so great that our losses were slight. The engagement commenced at 11 o'clock and ended at 1. The Emperor assisted at the operations, and the Prince Imperial, who accompanied him everywhere, received on the first field of battle his baptism of fire. His presence of mind and sang froid in danger were worthy of the name he bears. The Emperor returned to Metz at 4 P. M.

[Saarbrück is situated on the River Saar, in Rhenish Prussia, about forty miles south south-east of Treves. It is about six miles distant from the French frontier, and is one of the wealthiest cities in Prussia. It is chiefly a commercial town, and is unfortified, although the fortress of Saar-louis is but fifteen miles distant. Saarbrück contains many superb residences belonging to the rich Germans living there, as well as some handsome public buildings, law courts, &c., and contains a popuiation of about 16,000. The city is divided in two parts by the river, and that part of the city on the right bank is known as San Johann, while that on the left bank is called Saarbrücken proper. The town was founded in the tenth century, and was presented to the Church of Metz by the Emperor HENRY III. It was subsequently governed by its own Counts, until, in 1360, it went, by the terms of a marriage contract, into the possession of the family of NASSAU, and was afterward strongly fortified. In the wars which followed, the people suffered much from assaults made at intervals. The hostile troops were usually quartered upon the people, and committed all sorts of depredations without fear of punishment. In 1676 it was the scene of another conflict of arms. It was then almost destroyed by fire and its fortifications completely dismantled. There are woolen factories, which furnish extensive employment, located in the town, and mines of iron and coal are worked in the vicinity. In fact the district about the city is one of the best coal regions in Europe, and large fortunes have been realized from the sale of even small lots in the neighborhood.]

The Departure of King William for the Army---Extraordinary Scenes in Berlin---The Press Correspondent Question---American Donations.

BERLIN, Aug. 2---Noon.---The scene on the departure of King WILLIAM for the seat of war, on Sunday evening, was extraordinary. The King rode from the Palace to the railway station in an open carriage, with the Queen. He wore a short military cloak, and his helmet was placed on the seat by his side. The carriage was surrounded, followed and frequently stopped by an immense multitude, wild with emotion, shouting farewells and benedictions. The houses were hung with flags and festooned with flowers. At the railway station arches were erected and patriotic inscriptions displayed. The Queen, weeping, parted from the King with repeated embraces. When His Majesty, from the platform of the railway car finally saluted the crowd, the scene was indescribable. The people were frenzied with enthusiasm. The entire Court, ladies and all, mingled with the crowd, and participating in its emotion surrounded the old soldier and bid him good-by with every demonstration of loyalty and devotion. Count von BISMARCK and Gens. MOLTKE and VON ROON were present and were repeatedly cheered. The Prussian commanders rigorously exclude foreign correspondents from their lines. The Deutsche Bank, of this city, offers to receive and disburse donations made in America for the benefit of wounded soldiers.

Early Dispatches Received in London---The Cause of the Delay in Active Operations---A Famine Feared---The Times on the Situation---Napoleon Must Form New Plans---Miscellaneous.

LONDON, Aug. 2.---Advices have been received here by telegraph from the Prussian head-quarters on the Rhine up to 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There had been no general engagement up to that time. Scouting parties and skirmishers from both armies were continually making raids into the enemy's territory, but it was believed this was more to accustom the troops to the sight and fire of the enemy than for any other purpose. The London journals appear today without a word from the rival armies on the Rhine. The impression prevails here that the arrival of the French fleet in the Baltic Sea alone prevented the Prussian advance through France to Paris. Advices, from Prussian sources, mention the prevalence throughout Germany of an unwavering assurance of ultimate victory. The presence of the armies on the frontiers of France and the Rhenish Provinces of Prussia, has given rise to serious apprehensions of a famine there. The Opinion Nationale, of Paris, says in this connection, that in order to avoid impoverishing the theater of the war, the Emperor draws his supplies from a distance by railroad. The Times this morning has a long editorial on the prospect. The writer thinks the delay in military movements on both sides is to be ascribed to the demoralization of the troops from having been moved by rail. The French were also delayed on account of the hesitation of the South-German States, and are now necessarily confined to the narrow ground of the Saar Valley. In fact, the entire preconceived plan of the Emperor has been altered by unforeseen circumstances of this sort, and he has yet, probably, to form a new one. The Times argues that the arm of the French, the Chassepot, on account of the likelihood of its fouling speedily, will be found to be infinitely less efficient than the needle-gun, and the difference in this respect will possibly be sufficient to govern the result of the war. Active recruiting for the marine service has been ordered at the English dock-yards. Extreme activity is noticed in the English ports and dock-yards, and extensive preparations are being made to put the coast defenses in a condition to resist attack. Evidence hourly accumulates of the superiority of the needle-gun over the Chassepot, and the fact creates deep boredom in France. The Pall Mall Gazette estimates that the Prussian Army on the frontier now mustters half a million men.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 2---Noon.---The correspondent of the Independance Belge, writing from Metz, asserts that the first great battle will be fought on Saturday or Sunday next---or Monday at the furthest. He underscores the sentence following, viz.: "This is sure."

Rumored Crisis in the Prussian Cabinet---Catholicism Favoring France---King William at Mayence.

PARIS, Aug. 2.---An absurd canard was circulated to-day to the effect that a serious misunderstandmg prevailed in the Prussian Court; that the Crown Prince had accused Count BISMARCK of alienating England; that BISMARCK threatened to resign, and that there was a prospect of a crisis in the Cabinet. Though the religious element plays little or no part in the present war, the sentiment of the Catholic populations in neutral countries is adverse to Prussia; and by some fervid Catholics the advance of the French armies is regarded in the light of a crusade.

MAYENCE, Aug. 2---11 A. M., via. London.---KING WILLIAM arrived here this morning, with several members of his staff. His Majesty received highly satisfactory reports from the three army corps on the French frontier.

The Triple Alliance---Its Announcement Premature---The Roman Question---Italy Strengthening Her Army---Neutrality in Denmark and Sweden---An Antagonist Denial from Russia---Austria's Movements.

FLORENCE, Aug. 2.---The Opinione says England, though she remains neutral, declines to enter into engagements with other Powers for the preservation of neutrality. The statement in the Nazione yesterday, that England had joined Italy and Austria in an alliance of neutrality was premature. In conformity with the decision of a Council of Generals, held on the 23d ult., the effective force of the Italian Army is being rapidly raised to 120,000 men. A camp of 20,000 is established between Mantua and Verona, and two camps of observation are forming on the Pontifical frontier. It is the intention of the Italian Government to enter Rome as soon as the French Army withdraws, on the plea of protection. Gen. KANZLER, Papal Minister of War, is preparing a camp of observation in the Province of Viterbo.

ROME, Aug. 2.---The French Chasseurs left Civita Vecchia yesterday.

Italy is concentrating troops on the Roman frontier.

PARIS, Aug. 2.---The first installment of French troops from Rome arrived at Marseilles this morning.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 2.---There is entire harmony between Denmark and Sweden in the matter of the Franco-Prussian war. The Duke DE CADORE, the Special Envoy of France, had a long interview, today, with Baron ROSENOW, of the Foreign Office. The object was to urge an alliance between France and Denmark. The German fleet, including the iron-clad König Wilhelm has collected in Wilhelm-haven. The report that it had been disarmed and the men paid off is regarded as a canard. As yet only nine French vessels have arrived in Danish waters. The weather is hazy.

LONDON, Aug. 2.---Russia indignantly repudiates the design, with which she has been charged, of taking advantage of the war in Europe to invade the Danubian Principalities.

VIENNA, Aug. 2.---Austria is mobilising 80,000 men to watch the Bohemian frontier.

The Sheridan Story Medivivus---Correspondents Again Arrested---Sanitary Supplies---French Army Notes.

PARIS, Aug. 2.---The Figaro of today announces that the Government has refused the offer of the American Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN to serve in the French army. The Gaulois says that the correspondent of the London News and another Englishman named CAMERON have been arrested at Metz as spies. The women of France are sending immense quantities of bedding and hospital furniture to the army. Nine hundred surgical students have gone to the front. Among the Chaplains in the French service are nine Protestant and three Israelite clergymen. The wearing of the shako is to be discontinued in the army. The Emperor, since he has been with the army, has kept one telegraph wire constantly busy with his correspondence with the Empress.

Further Debate on the War in the British Parliament---Peace Measures---England Must Wait Her Opportunity---The National Defense.

LONDON, Aug. 2.---In the House of Lords today, Earl RUSSELL moved the second reading of the bill amending the Militia acts. He spoke at some length in review of the condition of foreign affairs, and said the Government requires full defensive powers. The intrigues and perils upon the Continent are due to uncertainty as to the course to be pursued by England. In his opinion, we need only to declare for the enforcement of the treaties, whereupon half the danger would vanish, for neither of the warring Powers courts the hostility of England. Only in this manner could Antwerp be saved. Earl GRANVILLE lamented the noble Lord's palpable lack of confidence in the Government. A week ago he had fully sustained it, and the speaker knew of nothing that had since occurred that could properly alter his intention. While fully sensible as to our obligations to Belgium, Earl GRANVILLE considered it needless and injudicious to discuss them with this publicity. Last week, he continued, the noble Lord approved the course of the Ministers, and was ready to back them up. The change in his position was irrational and inexcusable.

In the House of Commons Mr. GLADSTONE, in reply to a question put by Mr. HARCOURT, said he was unable to submit the correspondence of the late Earl of CLARENDON, urging disarmament upon the Powers. It was inexpedient even to repeat its purport. He thought, however, that either France or Prussia might properly do so. Baron ROTHSCHILD said Mr. GLADSTONE three weeks ago proposed the signing of a protocol by the Powers, recognizing the renunciation of the Spanish crown by the Prince of HOHENZOLLERN, but he did so personally and informally, leaving the initiative to England. On July 19, when it was entirely too late, the proposition was formally repeated; but even then it was supposed the renunciation would satisfy France, whom England had vainly besought to withdraw her demand upon Prussia. Further remonstrance now can only exasperate either Government, and the only course for England is to seek a safe opportunity for renewed efforts in favor of peace. Mr. OTWAY, Under Foreign Secretary, promised to the House the treaties and guarantees for the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemboug. Mr. CARDWELL, Secretary for War, in answering a question, said all the British regulars, except one regiment in India, are armed with the Snider rifle; while of the militia and volunteers, some have breech-loaders. On the proposition of the Government to enlist 25,000 additional regulars, a discussion arose. Sir W. LAWSON urging that now was the time for the intervention of England to secure peace between France and Prussia. Sir J. PAKINGTON followed, in support of the proposal of the Ministry, and in his remarks urged the importance of its adoption, in view of the present weakness of the country.

The Switzerland Fund-A Monster Fair to be Held in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.---The Germans of Chicago are making arrangements for holding a monster fair about the 30th inst., for the purpose of raising funds to be devoted to the aid of their countrymen in fatherland.

OLLIVIER ON THE WAR.

The Result to France Correspondents with the Army---Gen. Lebrun Excludes them.

The military correspondent of the London Daily News, writing from Paris July 17, gives the following account of his efforts to obtain permission to go with the army: "As I returned, and a little later M. OLLIVIER received me. I had expected he would simply inform me whether I could obtain the desired safe conduct or not; but when I found that he entered into more general subjects, I asked whether I might communicate to you his conversation---a permission which he granted me. I will accordingly try to give the conversation as I heard his share of it, well knowing the great difficulty of reducing such a verbal communication to writing. M. OLLIVIER began by telling me that the War Minister, Gen. LEBOEUF, objected to all foreign correspondents, and also to French ones, if they would persist in having a writer with the French Army, or at least that such was the present determination, which might indeed be afterward modified. He then expressed his extreme sorrow at the attitude of the English Press, which he said was based upon a complete misapprehension of the true causes of the war. M. OLLIVIER seemed not so much vexed or annoyed, as grieved at the comments in our journals. He complained that the Emperor had always been more than friendly toward England, that he himself had done everything to promote warm relations between the two countries; that especially he had studied the English commercial interests, but that now he was accused of breaking the peace of Europe. As to Germany, he had taken office on the condition that there should be no German war; the Emperor, too, was well aware of the responsibility involved, and was most anxious not to destroy a state of peace, but he was impossible to permit Prussia to drag them through the mud by an insult openly and publicly avowed. Indeed, in the legitimate interests of the dynasty, M. OLLIVIER had been obliged to entertain the idea of war. France could not brook an insult, or at least believe it one. For fifteen years under Louis PHILIPPE, had, it is true, once made her swallow one, but this was the cause of the downfall of the Orleanist family. The exact sequence of events which caused the war was as follows: The Prussian King had at first made concessions. This had aroused against him a war party. To conciliate this party he had given Prussia an insult, and published it. It was the publication upon which M. OLLIVIER most dwelt.] The Chassepot must now decide; but, as France was united to a man; there was no doubt of the eventual result. I have tried to exactly report what M. OLLIVIER said, but I can convey to you no idea of the power of "verve" it would possess, to be the best word---with which he spoke. I asked his permission to argue the question why correspondents should be excluded from the field. This permission he gave as a matter of course, and I then pointed out that if two parties were engaged in a quarrel, and both were represented by correspondents, accused by one side and exculpated by the other, it was only believing in human nature to suppose that the combatants whose hopes, whose fears, whose struggles, were painted each day to educated England, would at length become mistress of English sympathies. I instanced the 1866 war, in which the Austrians undoubtedly were sympathized with the Austrians, but in which the correspondents, encouraged by one party, snubbed and muzzled by the other, to an immense extent helped to bring English opinion round to Northern Germany. I also gave him one instance in which to my personal knowledge the Prussians had thought to benefit by writers in the press of war. I pointed out how easily correspondents might be controlled so as to prevent their giving hurtful information of the massing of troops, &c. To an unexpected extent M. OLLIVIER acquiesced in these arguments, but I fear it was the acquiescence of politeness, not of conviction. He promised to report them all to Gen. LEBOEUF, who he distinctly gave me to understand was real arbiter in this matter. So closed my audience. As to M. OLLIVIER'S manner while it continued, the only faint idea that I can give of its perfection is to say that all through I had great difficulty in remembering I was the position which he holds, so completely he can put me at my ease and treat me on a footing of equality.

THE ARMAMENTS.

A Comparative Outline of the Force and Armaments of France and Prussia.

From the London News, July 22.

Before the combatants have actually joined battle, and before the attention of our readers is concentrated, to the exclusion of all else, on the daily progress of the war, it may be well to state as precisely as we can the military and naval force arrayed for this great and dubious contest. A comparison between the fleets and armies of two nations cannot be a true, be correctly drawn by a mere addition of numbers. Innumerable qualities have as yet to go upon. Time will too soon show the comparative merits of the Chassepot and the needle-gun, of the soldiers who carry them, of Baron VON MOLTKE, and of the French Marshals. We have taken the following statistics from the Statesman's Year Book, a volume which embodies in a few hundred pages an immense quantity of well-arranged information.

The French Army consists of three divisions, called in the Army Reorganization act of 1868, which established them, the "Active Army," the Army of Reserve," and the "National Guard Mobile." All is recruited by yearly draughts which are practically unlimited in number. With certain exemptions, every Frenchman aged twenty-one is obliged to serve in the army or in the Guard Mobile. The latter force can only be called out for active service by a special law which, as our readers know, passed the Chambers with scarcely a division a few days since. The Guard Mobile relieves the Active Army of the defense of the fortresses, coasts and frontiers of the Empire, and to it will be committed the maintenance of interior order. The war footing of the regular army is as follows: Staff, men, 1,041; horses, 1,000; infantry, men, 536,987; horses, 36,000; cavalry, men, 100,521; horses, 86,400; artillery, men, 56,192; horses, 49,886; engineers, men, 15,448; horses, 1,400; gendarmes, men, 25,698; horses, 18,000; troops of the administration, men, 32,365; horses, 12,000---total men, 751,737; horses, 148,286. The peace footing amounted to about half these numbers, but was accordingly to a report of the Minister of War issued last year, to an effective force of 834,380 men, with 55,700 horses. As this, the officially stated effective strength of the peace footing, was only less by about one-fifth than the paper strength, we may conclude that the paper war strength quoted above is not more than by the same proportion in excess of the actual men and horses which will shortly be available. At the commencement of 1869, the Army of Reserve was stated to be 400,846 men, and the National Guard Mobile at 561,626. The gives a total for all purposes of 1,337,926 men under arms, or liable to be placed under arms, and there is no doubt that if the Emperor exerts his full strength he will be able, and that almost at once, to bring into the field a force of 1,000,000 men upon the Rhine over half a million of men, including more than 60,000 cavalry. His artillery last year possessed 1,320 field and siege guns.

The navy of France consisted, at the end of 1869, of 82 iron-clads, 364 unarmored screw-steamers, 62 paddle-steamers and 112 sailing vessels, the iron-clads having a carry of 372,000 tons. Most remarkable among them are the Gloire, Invincible, Couronne, Normandie, Invincible and the turret-ship Taureau, all heavily plated and armed. The Taureau carries a single twenty-ton gun, and her deck is covered for its entire length with a cylindrical ball-proof dome, so immense that it is not practicable to work on it. Four of the iron-clads are four-turret ships; another, the Eschambeau, was bought from the United States for £400,000; several are armed with heavy spurs or beaks, and all the first-class vessels can be driven at a high speed. The iron-clad fleet is made up of 14 ships of over 6,000 tons, 20 of 5,000 to 6,000 tons, 9 corvettes, 1 garde côtes, 15 batteries flottantes, and 11 batteries flottantes démontables. These last were built for the Crimean and Italian wars, and at the end of 1869 were "en magasin." On the peace footing the strength of the navy is 74,000 men, including the dockyard people. But this war-footing can be raised to 150,000, that being the number entered on the lists for the maritime conscription. These numbers exclude 22,317 marines and colonial troops.

Leaving aside a few exceptions, the whole male population of Prussia may be said to be trained for arms---ready for offensive warfare either in the army or the Landwehr, from the age of twenty to that of thirty-six, and in the Landsturm, for defensive warfare within the country, to the age of fifty. The Prussian Army is divided into companies, battalions, regiments and corps d'armée. In peace, the strength of a battalion as its mess is in war, this may be raised to 1,003 men, and would consist of four companies. Three battalions go to a regiment, two regiments to a brigade, two brigades to a division. Two divisions form a corps d'armée, and three battalions of riflemen or a battalion of pioneers. The corps d'armée is considered a unit independent and complete in itself, and includes not only troops of all three arms, but a department of transport. There are, including those of the annexed provinces, and that of the Guards, thirteenth corps d'armée, each consisting of two divisions of infantry, a cavalry division of four regiments, with two horse artillery batteries attached, and an artillery reserve of four field batteries and two mounted batteries. Reckoning also above those regiments of cavalry it must be remembered that two form part of each infantry division.

By the charter of 1867 the Prussian obligation to serve in the army is extended to the whole Northern Federation. Every Hessian is liable to service, and no substitution is allowed. The Federal troops take the oath of fealty to the Federal GENERALISSIMO, and all form one army under his command.

The King of Prussia has simply to draw on the population of the North-German Confederation to increase his army. By availing himself of his Landwehr he can raise it to more than a million of men, all more or less trained in the use of arms. By the mobilisation of the reserve troops it may be placed upon its war strength in about a fortnight. In 1866 it took less time than this to bring the whole Prussian regular army, together with the first levy of the Landwehr, into the field. According to official returns the total strength of the army of the North German Confederation amounts to 310,886 men on the peace footing, and to 971,963 on the war footing. This war establishment comprises: Field troops, privates and non-commissioned officers, 811,576; depots, do., 120,073; garrison troops, do., 26,802; officers, staff and military school, 13,512.

These are the armies of Prussia, or rather of the North German Confederation. But, as the non-Confederate States of the South have now made common cause in defense of the father-land, we must add their forces to the total. The Bavarian Army upon its peace establishment numbered 50,000 men, and at least 50,000 more can be had by calling in the reserves. Würtemberg can furnish in war-time 24,468 men, and Baden 30,722. There is practically no limit to the numbers which are ready to do the bidding of the King of Prussia. If the war goes against Germany, it will not be because the Locks troops defend her. She can muster any French armies that may be sent into the Rhine man for man, and have men to spare.

It can scarcely be expected that the navy of Prussia will be able to keep the sea. She has, or had this time last year, but six iron-clads. The König Wilhelm, the Prince Frederick Karl, and the Kronprinz are the most powerful. The two last have been built in this country, and second at La Seyne, near Toulon, and after the model of the Gouverne and Normandie, of the French Navy. The König Wilhelm carries four 300-pounders, and twenty-three rifled 96-pounders, made of KRUPP'S hammered steel, and capable of being fired with seventy-five pound charges twice in a minute. A duel between the König Wilhelm and the Magenta or Solferino, or, still more, the cupola ship Taureau, will go far to decide some of the vexed questions of naval architecture and armament. In the Summer of 1869 the Prussian navy was officered and manned by 4,888 men and boys, all told.

BELGIUM AND HOLLAND.

Expectations from England---Military Preparations---The Troops, their Stations, and Commanders.

The Brussel's correspondent of the London Times, of July 21, writes:

Belgium looks anxiously to England for aid and countenance in the event of an invasion of her territory, and every line of the English Press and every word uttered in the English Parliament is carefully examined and weighed. Meanwhile, the military authorities are taking the most energetic steps to protect the neutrality of the country. The army has been put on a full war footing, all the reserves having been called up. Every hour men from all parts may be seen toiling along the hot and dusty roads to their respective depots, and all those who had been sent to their homes after their customary periods of drill have been recalled. In addition to the citizen army of Gardes Civiques and Volunteers, Belgium has now 100,000 men under arms. They are divided into two corps, the first being commanded by Lieut.-Gen. ROBERMS, with Col. BRIALMONT as Major-General. The first corps will guard the new and extensive fortification lines of Antwerp, and there are already 40,000 men on this duty; both officers and men are vigorously working night and day to place the defenses in perfect condition. The Second Corps (d'armée d'observation) is placed under the general command of Lieut.-Gen. Baron CHAZAL, and comprises two divisions---one under the command of the Comte DE FLANDRE, (brother to the King,) and the other under Gen. DAVID. These divisions will guard the French and Prussian frontiers. The Comte DE FLANDRE will establish his general quarters at Louvain, and Gen. CHAZAL at Liége. The troops will leave Brussels to-morrow. The Garde Civique will do duty at the garrisons of Brussels, Malines, Ghent, Bruges, &c. These civic soldiers are already under arms. The duty is heavy. In one small office, near where I write these lines, five young men are called from their desks. Military duty is also heavy in the adjoining country of Holland. A gentleman who has just returned from there tells me that the poor men who had just completed their terms of three years' service, and should have been disbanded and sent to their several homes on Saturday, were suddenly recalled while at the railway station in anticipation of a joyful reunion. They were sadly shopfallen, but dutifully retraced their steps to head-quarters. The various viaducts and bridges on the frontiers of France and Prussia have been undermined, and on Friday evening, orders were telegraphed to the several officers in charge to blow them up on the approach of any armed forces on either side. One unfortunate sub-officer, in the absence of his principal, misunderstood the instructions, and at once blew up the bridge near Blandain Station, on the frontier of France on the Calais, Lille and Brussels Railway. The damage has been temporarily repaired.

The London Daily News of July 21 says: "Among the canards which have recently been set afloat is a statement that the Cabinet have been considering the propriety of sending a body of troops to Antwerp, in order to protect the neutrality of Belgium; and that orders have been given to hold a sufficient detachment in readiness for the purpose. France and Prussia have announced their intentions to respect Belgian neutrality, and the British Government is not likely to take any step which proceeds on an assumption at once of bad faith on the part of those Powers, and of the insufficiency of the preparations of the Belgian Government for the maintenance of its own neutral position. Our readers will be amply warranted in entire disbelief of these rumors."

THE FRENCH PRESS.

Comments on Military Movements---Explosive Bullets---Importance of Intrenchments and the Artillery.

From the Siècle, July 22.

The following quotation from Le Siècle is important as showing the unity of the French people in this war. The Siècle is one of the leading irreconcilable journals. The writer says:

"We have numerous complaints to redress, rights and liberties to claim, principles to defend; the time will come when we may resume the task so fatally interrupted. At this time we only wish and we only should think of the contest on which depends the future. This theological war we have contended against and kept back as much as we could, so long as it was merely a threatening cloud; all that we have said about it we think still. Yes, it is an impious war; yes, it is fratricidal; yes, it is monstrous, it is barbarous that an epoch, when all honest and sensible men have for their ideal the establishment of the United States of Europe, two great nations which should have a mutual self-esteem rush upon one another like savage beasts; but, as soon as war has been declared, as soon as the life of France is at stake, what we have said we no longer repeat; we see only our country; all for her, all by her, and whatever our brothers are already in the presence of the Prussian army; they must feel sustained by our patriotism and our devotion; they must know that the France for which they fight is united with them. From a hundred different localities do we receive letters saying, that in the presence of the hosts of Germany deserting to fulfill their duty, whose citizens who voted No on the plebiscite, bitterly reproach those who voted Yes as being the cause of the war which we shall sustain. These quarrels are unfortunate, and discords dangerous. Let each say only: 'Our country's destinies are to be decided on the battle-field. Yet we unite as the members of one family would unite to protect their mother; were she mother menaced. Later will we draw from circumstances [illegible] we can contain; we will take it o account what i cost a people to set aside their own supremacy. But in this hour let us have but one cry---'Vive la France!'"

EXPLOSIVE BULLETS.

Correspondence of the Siècle, from Metz, July 19.

There is considerable talk here about the explosive bullets of the Baden troops. You know that Baden refused to sign the agreement by which England, France, Austria, Prussia and Russia bound themselves not to use these terrible instruments of destruction. Prussia has played her game with her usual perfidy; she signed the agreement, it is true, but she ordered her vassal, Baden, to keep clear of it, so that the Baden troops marching with her she will be able, despite her signature, to make use of the 40,000 explosive balls accumulated at Rastadt. Thanks to the diligence of the little Grand Duke, who troops are under the orders of M. DURTHEIMER. Rest assured that the French Government is not ignorant of this little matter, and will take its proper precautions. To the Prussian explosive will be opposed the French explosive, and if we will demonstrate again the value to be placed on agreements signed in time of peace, Prussia's conduct is indefensible. Up to this time the first principle of war consisted in subduing the enemy to an incapability of action. Projectiles wounded oftener than they killed, and the object was attained. But with the explosive bullets, no more wounded. Every case, his is killed. Prussia has committed the crime of high treason against humanity. She should be outlawed by all civilized nations.

IMPORTANCE OF INTRENCHMENTS.

Correspondence of the Siècle, Metz, July 20.

The correspondent of the Siècle, writing from Metz, says:

"With the new weapons, we are no longer in the period when JOMINI could say, 'The assailant has the advantage on his side.' The terrible destructive weapons of modern warfare have reversed this proposition. It is evident that in the contest between two armies the advantage will be with the one which is placed in a position to fortify behind its intrenchments. The whole system of tactics, therefore, consists in annoying the enemy on his flanks, to render his position as uncomfortable as possible, and compel him to retreat at once out and fight. Since Sadowa, the idea has become prevalent that war is only a matter of a short campaign of two weeks, or a month at the furthest. One great struggle and the thing is done. But just because a single contest may end all, both parties will hesitate long before risking a battle."

IMPORTANCE OF THE ARTILLERY.

Correspondence of L'Independance Belge, Metz, July 19.

A correspondent, writing to the Independance Belge from Metz, considers that the chief cause which has retarded the advance of both armies is the lack of artillery horses, and adds:

"Everything tends to strengthen the belief that the artillery will bear the brunt of the battles; it will be the deciding weapon. The best military authorities in this part of France are daily becoming more and more convinced that the infantry lines will not stand a rapid artillery fire for one minute; they will fall back or attack with the bayonet."

THE CHASSEPOT AND THE NEEDLE-GUN.

We find in the Temps an interesting comparison between the French and the Prussian weapons. The Temps considers:

1. Range and Efficacy of the Weapons.---The velocity of the ball of the Chassepot, in passing out of the mouth of the piece, is 500 metres, that of the needle-gun is only 257 metres. As a result of this enormous difference in the initial velocities of the two balls, it follows that at 500 metres the Prussian ball is nearly "spent," while at 1,000 metres the French ball kills almost certainly, disables at 1,500 metres, and may still do service at a distance of 1,600 or 1,800 metres.

2. Precision of Aim.---The accuracy of the French arm is greater at a distance of 1,000 metres than that of the Prussian at 500. The bridge of the first is graduated up to 1,200 metres, while that of the second only goes up to 600 (600 Prussian feet.)

3. Rapidity of Firing.---The French gun requires four movements for loading, the Prussian weapon five, so that the Chassepot can be fired from twelve to thirteen times a minute, and the needle-gun only eight or nine during the same time.

4. The fourth point claims that the Prussian weapon fouls much sooner than the Chassepot, and requires more frequent repairs.

5. Weight of the Arms and Accoutrements.---The French weapon weighs 4 kilog. without the bayonet and 4 kilog. 600 with the sabre-bayonet. The Prussian gun weighs 5 kilog. without the bayonet, and 6 kilog. 250 with it. The handling of the latter is therefore the most fatiguing. The French cartridge weighs 32 grams, the Prussian 41 grams.

GENERAL WAR NOTES

The Bridge at Kehl---A Reconnaissance to Queen Victoria---The English Attitude---A New Version of the Scene at Ems.

The bridge at Kehl, says the Pall Mall Gazette, no longer offers the amusing spectacle it formerly presented. The sentinels who mounted guard at each end of it are no longer in their places. It was curious to watch them pacing up and down their own share of the bridge. A line traced across showed the precise spot which neither might pass; and so the two marched along---the one with the vivacity of the Frenchman, the other with the placidity and phlegm which belongs to the German. The sentinels often met in the middle of the bridge; the Frenchman looked at the Prussian and the Prussian looked at the Frenchman, and each without saying a word, turned on his steps. Indeed, there is no example of these slaves to discipline having ever offered each other a pinch of snuff. One evening last year, says a French paper, the Prussian sentinel was suddenly heard calling, "To arms!" The frightened bystanders ran up and found that the French sentinel had considerably pushed his foot beyond the line of demarcation, and thus invaded Prussian territory!

"The Times," remarks the Spectator of July 23, "addresses a serious remonstrance to the Queen for going to Osborne as such a time, when Ministers are overworked, the weather frightful to travel in, and events of such vast importance to England in prospect. Supposing circumstances to demand the dispatch of a fleet to Antwerp, the Premier must lose a day, travel 220 miles, and exhaust himself with fatigue in order to obtain the needful authorization. Even when Europe is not at war, the interruption of business which extraordinary grief in the Queen is perfectly just, but of what use is it? The experience of years has proved that Queen VICTORIA will perform any duty, undergo any sacrifice, bear any trouble for her people, except she duty, the sacrifice and the trouble involved in reading where all Ministers, all members and all other great officials are compelled to reside. There is no remedy, except to endure in patience a practice utterly inconsistent with the whole tenor of Her Majesty's career."

"We may say the London Times of July 23," "lay down a general principle---that, taking the war as a fact, and looking to the future rather than the past, it will be wise for Parliament to leave the Queen free from any appearance of taking a side. It may be impossible for individuals to refrain from sympathy with one combatant or the other. The British Parliament represents at least as many sympathies as it does races and creeds. One may desire the success of the Germans as the price of Crimean blood, and be glad to see the arrogance of Berlin humbled. Another may look upon Imperialism as the curse of Europe, and hope that its hour is come. But so far as men of position, who either are or may be Ministers, commit themselves to partisanship, so far will the influence of England be weakened when the time for its exercise comes. A nation which has offered mediation, and which, therefore, professes the character of a peacemaker, ought, from regard to its own pretensions, to maintain a demeanor of impartiality, and the statesmen on either side of the two Houses are the representatives of England in this important matter."

A Berlin dispatch of July 21 says: "The King of Prussia has sent the following telegram to the King of Bavaria: 'On receipt of the decision from your Majesty I immediately assumed the command of the Bavarian Army, and I incorporated it with the Third Army Corps, placed under the command of the Crown Prince. By an unheard-of presumption we have been driven from the most profound peace into war. For you and Germany this rude task has electrified your people, and all Germany is now united as it never was at any former time. May God bless our arms in the fortune of war! I tender you my most heartfelt thanks for your faithful adherence to our treaty upon which Germany rests.' The King of Bavaria replied: 'Your telegram has awakened in me a joyful echo. The Bavarian troops, side by side with their glorious brethren in arms, will enter enthusiastically into the struggle for German right and German honor. May the war tend to the welfare of Germany and the safety of Bavaria!'"

The Morning Post is "assured, on the authority of a well-informed Ems correspondent, whose information is implicitly relied on, that the scene between the King and M. BENEDETTI, which the public have generally believed in on the faith of some newspaper correspondents, did not occur," and adds: "The French Ambassador never addressed the King, and His Majesty never expressed displeasure on being told the French Ambassador that he would hold no further communication with him. The statement of King WILLIAM, published yesterday, refers to the one and only interview which ever took place on the promenade at Ems. It was on the 19th the King, in the Kurgast Garden, spoke to M. BENEDETTI, and handed the Count the telegram to him with which the news of the step taken by Prince ANTON. Subsequently, at a later date, the French Ambassador pressed for an audience, upon which the King sent Prince RADZIVILL to decline it. When M. BENEDETTI left, the King, accidentally meeting him on his road to the station, saluted him courteously, and the personal relations between the Monarch and the French representative were never otherwise than excellent. The story of the escort ordered to the King, and the snub to the Ambassador, may therefore be relegated to the list of the ingenuous compiler of "the history of facts that never took place."

Many of the Paris papers having stated that Gen. CHANGARNIER had tendered his services during the pendency of war, and that a command was to be intrusted to him, that gallant General has sent the following letter to the principal journals: "Many papers have announced that Gen. CHANGARNIER had solicited the honor of serving in the war about to commence. They were slightly informed. I have brought and renewed to Marshal LEBOEUF, the Minister of War, to give me a command. Although received by the Minister with demonstrations of the warmest sympathy, my request has definitively been rejected. It is to me a deep sorrow, when I must endure in my country home. But our valiant army has at many able and experienced chiefs, that the absence of an old patriot will not be felt by it. Our soldiers, our dear soldiers, will be every where victorious."

THE TURF.

The Long Branch Race-Second Day---Major Wins the Mansion House Stakes, Glenelg the Double Race, and Judge Curtis the American Club Purse.

At the Long Branch races, yesterday, the number of visitors was greatly increased. The grand stand, which accommodates 1,000 persons, was filled to the utmost capacity. The ladies' department was crowded with a bright galaxy of beauty and fashion, and the exciting contests of the day appeared to afford them the highest enjoyment. Two companies of the Twenty-second Regiment, in full uniform, were present on the invitation of Mr. JOHN CHAMBERLIN, attended by their regimental band, and the members of the American Club, attired in their elegant and useful uniform, were also present, having come specially to witness the race for the purse of $2,500, their own gift to the Association. The result of yesterday's proceedings shows that the Long Branch race-meeting is an assured and brilliant success.

The race for the Mansion House Stakes, for three-year olds, was contested by four out of the 24 horses entered. These were, Major, who had run second to Maggie B. B. for the Sequel Stakes, at Saratoga; Cavalier, who was placed third in the same race; Leland, the dark colt of Dr. WELDON'S, of whose merits rumor has spoken loudly for some time past; and Susan Ann. The result proved that public performance is almost always a better and more reliable guide than private reputation, for Major, after running up to the form he had publicly shown, won cleverly from Cavalier, while the untried Leland, ridden by his own good horse for a mile and three-quarters, failed to stay home, and finished last. He was far from being up to the mark in point of condition, being evidently short of work for such a race.

The distance of a mile and a half, for all ages, carrying 100 pounds, showed that a wonderful fast horse Glenelg is, for he lost no much ground at the start, owing to his fractiousness, that every one thought he was out of the race, which seemed left to B. B. Connolly, Boaster and Legates. The latter, on the last quarter, seemed to have the race in hand, for Boaster beat a retreat at the end of a mile, and the distance was a quarter mile too far for Connolly, who took his Saratoga mixture of a pint of whisky and water just before the race, but without the happy effects which followed its administration at that meeting. Glenelg, however, was admirably ridden, gradually rallied on his horse, passed them one by one on the last quarter, and, coming into the stretch on Legates, raced with him a few strides, and, quitting him as if he was standing, won "hands down" in the easiest of canters, by two lengths.

The American Club Purse of $2,000, mile heats, three in five, produced the best race of the day. Six horses entered and ran for the rich prize, and the recently-named Judge Curtis, better known as General Duke, won in three straight heats, in the fastest consecutive time on record. His owner, Mr. JOHN O'DONNELL, won a large stake on the race, but the gratification he experienced at winning the magnificent gift of the American Club was totally independent of its pecuniary value. Judge Curtis has proved himself the best mile-heat horse on the turf. This is the third race he has started for and won this season, and tion was certainly not expected before 1874. But although Prussia may be vulnerable on several points of her shores, she is nevertheless favored by nature as to her coast, the approach of which is difficult. The King has taken care, moreover, to unite them with the great centres of the interior by lines of railway that would permit the easy transport of troops, ammunition, and cannon to any point threatened or attacked by an enemy. Prussia relies especially upon her powerful cannon, of 9, 11, and even 14 inches in diameter, capable of penetrating sheets of iron of from 9 to 12 inches in thickness. Her iron-clad fleet is completely armed with these cannons, which, it is here said, will not terrify the intrepid French sailors. Although the Prussian Government has thus made an immense outlay in naval armaments, amounting to upward of $42,000,000, its ships are as far from being complete as its fortifications, said KING WILLIAM has thus been surprised in the midst of his agreeable preparations. The iron-clad vessels of the Prussian fleet actually effective at the end of last year may be summed up as follows:

	Cannons.	Horse-power.
3 turreted frigates	37	2,100
1 turreted corvette	9	500
11 iron-clads	[illegible]	1,700
Total	70	4,100

It will thus be seen that the French have little to fear from the Prussian naval forces, which are scarcely sufficient to defend the Prussian ports from attac. It is generally thought that a few of the Imperial vessels will suffice for blockading the said ports, and that an expedition will be sent to disembark in Jutland and to march with the Danes to the conquest of North Schleswig, now under the yoke of the assiatitious Prussian.

RUMORS FROM THE RHINE FRONTIER.

It was stated on Saturday that the French territory had been invaded at Sierck, a village within half an hour's railway from Metz. As there was but a small garrison at Thionville, of which place Sierck is a dependence, the inhabitants turned out for defense; but their courage was not put to the test, as the six Prussians who had ridden upon French ground declared themselves to be deserters, but they were nevertheless put into safe keeping, as nothing, say the French papers, resembles more a spy than a deserter. Of course, the strangest reports meet with ready circulation. A dispatch just received announces that an engagement between outposts took place this morning at Kehl, and another rumor will have it that the United States Government has announced its attention of taking a part in the war. It has just been officially stated at the Paris Bourse that Baron ROTHSCHILD has resigned his post of Prussian Consul at the French Capital. The Baron had endeavored to obtain an interview with the King of Prussia, with the avowed object of facilitating an arrangement of the matters in dispute between the French and Prussian Governments, but met with such a refusal as induced him at once to send in his resignation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Figaro had published a letter, copied from the German papers, and said to have been addressed by Count BRUKE, private Secretary to the King of Prussia, to M. THIERS, in reference to his anti-national speech in the French Chambers on the 15th inst. M. THIERS has just written to M. ODYSSE BARROT, and states that the letter as well as its contents are an odious falsehood, as he has had no communication whatever either with the King of Prussia or with any foreign Prince on the subject in question.... The High Court of Blois was opened this morning at 11 o'clock. After the decree of convocation was read, M. ETIENNE ARAGO asked for an adjournment of the trials, but the Court, on deliberating, rejected M. ARAGO's demand. The list of jurors was being called over when the last dispatch left. However much attention these trials might have attracted under ordinary circumstances, their interest is altogether effaced by the all-absorbing topic of the war with Prussia.... A Cabinet Council was held this morning at the Tuileries, under the presidence of the Emperor. Similar councils will be held every morning till the departure of His Majesty for the seat of war, the exact day for which has not yet been fixed.... Some of the French papers have spoken of the formation of a Council of Regency. This report, says Le Patrie, is without foundation.... It is thought that the Emperor's proclamation to the French people will not be published before the day of His Majesty's departure to join the army.... The official declaration of war left Paris last night for Berlin. It was taken by M. DE WERTHER, the Prussian Ambassador in Vienna, who happened to be momentarily at Paris.

War on Correspondents—News Obtained Under Difficulties—The American and Prussian Legations—An American Legion—The Negtes from Germany—The Transatlantic Steamers.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Wednesday, July 20, 1870.

I have been so occupied in getting off our correspondents to the army that I can only write very briefly by this mail. The French Government refuses facilities of any kind to the representatives of the foreign as well as their own Press, and all the applications made to the Ministry of War, through Mr. WASHBURNE, by American journalists, have remained without the courtesy of a reply, unless the notice published by the Journal Officiel, the day before yesterday, is to be regarded as one. The notice is to the effect that the Emperor has decided not to receive at the Imperial head-quarters, nor at the head-quarters of the army corps, any volunteer, or any foreign officer, in a word, any individual who is not connected with the army. This regulation is said to have been dictated by His Majesty in a fit of anger at the hostile tone adopted toward France by the English Press, but I can hardly believe that the Emperor would allow himself to be influenced by any consideration of this sort. The severe measures of repression hitherto adopted against the Press have been more generally the inspirations of his Ministers than his own, and it is easy to see from the projet de loi introduced in the Chambers inflicting penalties for the publication of war news, that in the present instance the decision was taken in council. As to its impolicy, there can hardly be two opinions outside the atmosphere of the Court. A month's campaign, with news freely circulating from the other side of the lines, will show that it would be better to give the newspapers full liberty to publish what they please. In nothing more than in military affairs does the suppressio veri lead to the suggestio falsi. The German journals will lie nicely about the events of the campaign, and the silence of the French organs will confirm, for a while, at least, the mendacious successes which they will be sure to circulate.

THE AMERICAN AND PRUSSIAN LEGATIONS.

You received of course, by telegraph, the announcement that with the joint concurrence of President GRANT and the Emperor, the Germans remaining in France have been transferred to the protection of the American Legation. On calling to see Mr. WASHBURN, today, I found him surrounded by a crowd of ragged Teutons, all confiding to him their grievances, and embarrassing him by the number and variety of their demands. The archives of the Prussian Legation have been conveyed to the Rue du Chillot, and I fear this fresh demand for space and heavy access of business will compel our Minister to look for roomier quarters.

AN AMERICAN LEGION FOR PRUSSIA.

While our diplomatic representative is affording aid and comfort to the Prussian Legation, a number of hot-headed American youths in Paris are trying to get up an American legion to aid France in the pending war. At least so says the American Register, and it ought to be well informed, for its office is a general lounge for our exile countrymen. The French papers have acted upon the statement in the Register as a proof of the sympathy which the United States feel for their old ally, and the article is making the rounds of all the Continental journals. I do not know whether the project is a serious one, but it is said that upward of forty names have already been appended to the paper recording the names of the volunteers. All the old heads of the colony, of course, ridicule the idea, and I need not say that there is but little probability of its being carried out.

THE EXODUS FROM GERMANY.

The railways are crowded with tourists and invalids flying from the German watering-places to escape the threatened blockade of the coast and the frontier. Mr. WASHBURNE came back a couple of days ago, and had all sorts of adventures on the road. He will probably not leave Paris again during the Summer, except to make a few days' trip to Tours, where his family are staying.

THE TRANSATLANTIC STEAMERS.

The Hamburg and Bremen lines of steamers, plying between European ports and New-York, are endeavoring to obtain, through our Minister, from France and Prussia a protection, to enable them to prosecute their trips uninterrupted. The question is surrounded with a great deal of difficulty, and I fear will not result favorably to the interests of the Competitors.

Reported Rallying Back of the Prussians From their Advanced Positions—The Camp of Saint-Avold—Troubles of Newspaper Correspondents—Skirmishes on the Frontier, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAMP OF SAINT-AVOLD, Wednesday, July 20, 1870.

On arriving here, yesterday, I found that a report had reached the camp that the Prussians had fallen back on Coblentz and Mayence. It is said that the entrance of the French into Saarbrück led to this movement, of the certainty of which I am in no way assured. The fact—if fact it is—would indicate that the Prussian Army is not in as forward a state of preparation as it has been represented to be.

The position occupied by the camp at St. Avold is excellent, inasmuch as it commands the valley of the Sarre, and is supported by Metz on the left. It is close to the frontier, the distance being only five kilometres or a little over three miles. There is a village, or rather town, near the camp, the inhabitants of which speak a sort of German patois.

There is a large force at present encamped here, and its numbers are being daily added to by arrivals of fresh troops from Chalons and other places. Gen. FROISSARD assumed the chief command the day before yesterday. The troops welcomed his arrival with great satisfaction, as he has not only the reputation of being an able soldier, but a kind and humane man.

It is not probable that there will be a great battle for ten days or a fortnight to come. There will be a good deal of skirmishing, perhaps a severe brush or two, between outposts, but no conflict of any importance. The Emperor is not expected down at Nancy before Monday or Tuesday next. His arrival will be the signal for the advance.

There is a small party of journalists here who have taken up their quarters in the town. They were taken for Prussians by the landlord of the inn where they are stopping, and had a visit from the authorities of the place to investigate their nationality. Of course they had no difficulty in establishing the purity of their French origin. I question if the respectable Magistrates who examined them, and who spoke in a lingo which was neither German nor French, could have got as easily out of a similar embarrassment.

It was reported, last night, that three Prussian spies were arrested on the Forbach road. One of them was disguised as a woman, and is said to have been killed. There is also a rumor of a skirmish having taken place in the direction of Saarbrück, between a patrol of Hulans and a reconnoitering party from one of the French advanced posts. One of the Hulans is reported to have been killed.

In another skirmish the Colonel of the Fifth Chasseurs had his arm slightly wounded by a ball.

Arrest of Newspaper Correspondents and English Officers—A London Times Man in Limbo—Discretion no Part of Cockney Valor—Plan of the Approaching Campaign, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

METZ, Thursday, July 21, 1870.

The war correspondents seem destined to have as hard a time of it as the professional fighting men. Not only are they exposed to all the mischances of the road and field, but they have to incur the risk of being taken in the act of contravening general orders and of being arrested and shot as spies. The instructions issued from the War Office for the exclusion of journalists and foreign officers from the lines, have received, as the French would say, "a commencement of execution." Last night the correspondent of the London Times and two English officers were arrested, the one as a Prussian spy and the others as infringing the general orders. The manner in which the mistake occurred is easily accounted for. These gentlemen, it appears, according to their own narrative, had passed the evening in a café "pumping" a soldier, whom large potations of beer and brandy had rendered somewhat communicative. While busily engaged trying to reconcile the incongruous facts which they gleaned in this way from their tipsy informant, and which might as well have been gathered from the rambling letters of the Figaro and Gaulois, marvels of newspaper enterprise in their way, they happened to be overheard by a patriotic tradesman, who, hearing them conversing in German (the soldier was Alsatian) immediately took them for emcoyés of M. DE BISMARCK, and had them arrested on their way from the café to the Hotel de l'Europe. A night in the guard-house, in the company of two or three drunkards, followed as a matter of course, and this morning the trio was brought before a superior officer, who, after hearing their explanation, ordered the correspondent of the Times to be set at liberty and the English officers to be conducted to the railway station by the gendarmes.

When I left Paris a few days since, the greatest animosity was shown by the partisans of war toward the peace party, and the man who was sufficiently imprudent to cry "vive la paix" in a public street had a very hard time of it. People whose opinion differed from his would knock his hat over his eyes, call him a Prussian, shake great fat fists in his face, and push him about in every direction until a sergent-de-ville managed to rescue him from the mob. Here the outcry is against spies, and it is only with the greatest risk that newspaper men and artists can take notes. Every day people are arrested, and after being locked up for several hours are either sent across the frontier or conducted to the railway station by gendarmes, or in the event of their establishing their identity, set at liberty, after being duly warned to mind what they are about. Metz and its environs are now occupied by the Third Corps of the Army of the Rhine, consisting of over 80,000 men, under the command of Marshal BAZAINE. His corps, it is said, is to be raised to 120,000 men, in a few days, and it is then expected that orders will be received to march. In the meanwhile, it is extremely difficult to obtain information respecting the movements of the troops, from the simple fact that no one appears to know anything; but from a letter written by a person employed in the War Office, which was shown me last night by a young officer, it would seem that fighting is expected to commence about the 28th of this month. As to the plan of the campaign, absolutely nothing is known except by the heads of the Army. However, I am assured, on very good authority, that Marshal BAZAINE's present plan is to march upon Coblentz, and in the event of success attending the French arms, to advance in the direction of Cassel. With this view, the Marshal's army, which as I said before, is 120,000 men strong, will be divided into three divisions. The fortresses of Treves and Saar-louis, are to be avoided. The left wing of the army is to be composed of the troops encamped at Thionville, the right wing of those encamped at Saint-Avold and the central division of those stationed at Metz. This plan may undergo considerable modification, but from the number of troops collected at Thionville, Metz and Saint-Avold, it is evident that something of the sort is contemplated. VIZ.

Movements About Strasbourg—Efforts to Drive Prussian Workmen from the Country.

From Our Own Correspondent.

STRASBOURG, Wednesday, July 20, 1870.

Marshal MCMAHON has not arrived here as yet. He is not expected before Sunday. His chief of the staff, Gen. COSSON, reached here this morning. The Emperor is expected on Friday next—at least, orders have been issued to prepare the chateau (the Imperial head-quarters) for that day.

A good deal of excitement has been created by the efforts which are being made by the populace to compel the Prussian workmen of M. COULAUX to leave the country. These men are attached to France, and do not want to serve against her. It seems hard that they should be maltreated for not going to side with the enemy. A similar piece of injustice is being committed in the case of M. POURTALES. He has been appointed Commandant of the Garde Mobile, of Strasbourg, and his revocation is being demanded by the ultras, on the ground of his being a Prussian and a Protestant. The truth is, that M. POURTALES, though his family were expelled from France by the Edict of Nantes, is as good a Frenchman as any of those who are raising an outcry against him.

Concentrating Troops on the Rhine—Desertion of the German Watering-Places—Preparations for the Contest.

From Our Own Correspondent.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Thursday, July 21, 1870.

I have just returned from a short trip up the Rhine. Upwards of forty thousand Prussians have passed through Cologne during the last three days. The troops are being pushed forward with all possible speed, and as far as the rolling stock of the railroad company permits. I apprehend the Prussians have somewhat the advantage over the French, inasmuch as the Government holds arbitrary powers in regard to the forwarding of troops, as well as military stores. Each freight car has a note attached to it indicating the number of men or horses to be forwarded, generally thirty-six men or eight horses. The railroad companies having to fit up cars for either purpose, bear the expenses consequent thereon. The ordinary traffic, as may well be supposed, is damaged to a great extent. The German Spas, Wisbaden, Homburg and Ems, are being deserted, the landlords and shopkeepers having adopted a suicidal policy, and subjected travelers to extortions which baffle all description. Neither English nor French bank-notes can save you from being shaved. Money-brokers will take circular notes only at ten and twelve per cent. discount compared with last year's rates. They claim justification from the fact of the Bank of Prussia having raised the discount from four to eight per cent. The immediate consequence has been a corresponding rise in the price of provisions. Butter is now selling at Cologne at two and a half and three francs a pound; the price of potatoes and other necessaries has trebled. In a very few days the authorities may be compelled to interfere, and things may assume a normal condition again. The number of troops pouring in from all sides has cut off railroad communication. All station masters, and railroad officials of all classes, have served in the army; in fact the place they occupy is only a reward for past military services. Even in ordinary times, they treat the public as recruits, while they, holding a superior position and wearing a uniform—albeit livery—to assume a right and power over the traveler, they are not there as servants ready to provide accommodations for the traveling public. This, then, being done at ordinary times, it is easier to imagine than to describe what the state of things is in the present exciting times. No one is safe, traveling is made irksome, and tourists and invalids have all packed up, either going to Switzerland, or moving toward Belgium. The neutrality of the latter country being guaranteed by the Continental Powers, and the belligerents having given the most positive assurances to that effect to the protecting Powers, there is for the moment no fear that Great Britain will be dragged into difficulties. It has all the appearance as if the war will be localized between France and Prussia. Each Power is concentrating its forces between Metz and Thionville, on one side, and Coblentz, Treves and Saar-louis on the other. The first battle will probably be fought in that neighborhood. I am pushing forward to Coblentz and Treves, where I hope to be in a day or two. The French, it is said, have not as yet appeared in sufficient force, the rolling stock being inadequate to the number of men. This circumstance has caused an impression on the mind of Prussian officers as if the French were illy prepared to meet them. The standard of superiority has consequently risen very considerably. Brains and intelligence are assumed to be on their side only, and they are eager for the first brush.

REPORTS FROM SPAIN.

Troubles of the Ministry—Activity of the Republicans—Strength of the Republic Scheme—The Regent—Present Situation—Highwaymen.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Friday, July 15, 1870.

The positive refusal of the crown by Prince LEOPOLD HOHENZOLLERN, which was officially made known yesterday, has greatly annoyed the friends of the Ministers and the whole of the Cabinet. The fourth refusal has been a great blow to the latter. It occurred at a time when the journals devoted to the Government, and the telegrams of the Minister of the Interior were stirring up successfully the official zeal of the prefects and other employes. But you must not on this account suppose there will be any reconstruction of the Ministry. There is no idea of the kind, for the requirements of a constitutional Government are not understood here in the same manner as in other countries. Gen. PRIM is one of the last to admit that he and his colleagues ought to retire in consequence of this fourth refusal. The Cabinet, therefore, unanimously decided, at a council held yesterday evening, that the convocation of the Deputies should be countermanded, and a decree to that effect has appeared in the Gazette of today. Whether the national representation has been insulted by having been treated in so off-hand a manner, is a matter of indifference to the Ministry, the President of the Council and the President of the Cortes, the latter of whom follows so blindly the wishes of PRIM. It is expected that the Cortes will reassemble on the 1st of November next, when, it is hoped, this unfortunate business will be forgotten. The Regent is dissatisfied with the levity with which matters of the greatest moment are treated in Spain, but as he has neither the energy nor requisite power to oppose the deplorable diplomatic errors committed here, he is obliged to indorse, without criticising too closely, the acts of the Ministry. The Minister of Foreign Affairs believes he has obtained the highest point of diplomatic skill; he is, therefore, under the impression that he ought not to retire, notwithstanding the diplomatic check he has just received. M. RIVERO, the Minister of the Interior, considers he has done enough for his country in having compelled the Prefect, M. MORENO BOUTZE, to resign, and by this means broken up the "La Forra" band of ruffians. Moreover, M. RIVERO does not see anything in the refusal of Prince LEOPOLD that should render it necessary for the Ministry to resign. M. BERANGUER, Minister of the Navy; M. FIGEROLA, Minister of Finance; M. MORET and M. ECHEGARAY, have no opinion of their own. They follow blindly, like M. ZORRILLA, the orders of Gen. PRIM. You can easily imagine that this fresh defeat sustained by the Monarchists authorizes the Republicans to believe that their party will ultimately succeed in seizing the reins of power.

CHANCES IN FAVOR OF A REPUBLIC.

The battle of Alcoica, but more than anything, public contempt, has shut out the BOURBON family from the throne of Spain. The placing of the son of ISABELLA on the throne is not to be thought of without exposing the country to a civil war, in which the liberals would fight to their last man. The reactionary party has but one candidate, the Duke of MONTPENSIER, but as his election would be considered destructive to the conquests of the revolution, the people would not have him and would oppose him to the death. Every one knows that the Duke is the favorite of the liberal Unionists, and that he is opposed by all the upholders of the revolution of September. He might thus, as the L'Epoque observes, become the King of a party, but not of the country. The Duke of VICTORY, Gen. ESPARTERO remains the only chance left out of the Republic. However honorable he may be the chief of the valiant defenders of the public liberties, he cannot reconcile himself to the idea of accepting the crown of Spain. He no doubt feels that his great age and weakened faculties would not enable him to display that energy and foresight necessary for the difficult task of presiding over the destinies of a great nation seeking from liberty its regeneration. As it is probable that Gen. PRIM will now be prudent enough to discontinue looking for a candidate in foreign Courts, it is not improbable that about the 15th of November, the thirty-third article of the Constitution will be modified so as to substitute the Republic for the Monarchy, or to continue the present state of affairs.

THE REGENT.

The friends of the Regent pretend to say it will be impossible for him to maintain his present position after the month of November, unless he is invested with regal power, and the frenzy of dissolving the Cortes. As the Cortes will not grant these powers so long as PRIM is Minister, for then the liberal Unionists would virtually hold the reins of power, they will continue the statu quo. M. FEDERICO will endeavor to make another loan, whatever may be the cost of it, in order to finish paying the Spanish bondholders, and they will go on living from hand to mouth, in this way, through the Winter. The Regent returns to La Granja. The French Ambassador has assured him that his Government will no longer offer any opposition to the choice of Spain, and everybody, in consequence, appears satisfied.

PERSONAL.

Instead of going to Vichy, Gen. PRIM will go to Alsola, to take the waters. His friends have advised him not to go to France, as he might be exposed to disagreeable manifestations.... The United States Minister is preparing to go to La Granja with some of the members of the Legation. The heat is excessive here, and the centigrade thermometer stands at 40° in the shade. You cannot go out without great danger between noon and 4 o'clock, as it would be the height of imprudence to expose oneself to the rays of the sun.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

The political situation in Spain is this: While the revolutionists and the Liberal Party are endeavoring to secure the conquests of September, the Government is employed in frustrating the intrigues which threaten to draw them from power. The state of the public Treasury is such that it cannot meet its engagements which press heavily upon it. The authority of the Government is without prestige and the law without effect. In the Province of Valentia the other day a band of smugglers more than a hundred in number, made an attack upon the salt mines of Torre Vieja in order to carry off some bags of salt. Shots were exchanged and several were killed and wounded.

HIGHWAYMEN.

The Police, by order of the Minister of War, are making a raid upon the highwaymen who are infesting the mountains in the Provinces of La Manche and Andalusia and the east of Spain. They have already shot twenty-six. This raid against these two-footed wolves, as they are called here, was very necessary for the safety of people living in these parts, for every day one heard of rich persons being seized in their own houses and taken off to the mountains and heavy sums being demanded by the highwaymen for their release. Information has been received of the existence in the Province of Malaga of a body of sixty men, mounted on horseback and armed with blunderbusses, (a gun with a large, short barrel, loaded with 180 grammes of powder and twelve balls.) The Police have received orders to pursue them and hunt them down.

A Scotch sailor, who became a little obstreperous in the street of Cadiz the other night was arrested by a watchman and struck on the head. A poor man interfered, but the Scotchman was taken to prison and is said to have split his head open against the bars of the window of the prison. But there are those who assert that his death was caused by the blow received from the lance of the watchman.

THE CARLISTS.

The refusal of Prince LEOPOLD has caused the Carlists to postpone their plans for the present.

CURRENT NOTES.

The citizens of Troy are taking active measures to procure a better and purer supply of water for that city.

The Connecticut Indians have located themselves this Summer in the neighborhood of the Pequot House, New-London.

A Cleveland, Ohio, firm have invested $100,000 in experimenting upon the usefulness of a patent coal-oil lamp.

One of the Spring newspapers of Worcester, Mass., with the view of being beforehand with the census-takers, estimates the population of that city at 35,000.

The death of Mr. COLEMAN YELLOTT, a prominent member of the Baltimore Bar, has been announced. He was born in Maryland in 1821.

Manchester, N. H., is at present passing through a series of fights, drunks, assaults, shootings, drownings and assassinations, which the Mirror attributes to the dog-days.

The proprietor of a garden on Bliss-street, Springfield, Mass., is blessed with a crop of corn twelve feet in height. A chicken in a neighboring street has four legs.

The Illinois Female College, recently destroyed by fire, is being rebuilt. The trustees hope to have it ready for the reception of students by September.

A child at Lansingburg, N.Y., a short time since, became affected so much with the heat that it fell into a sort of trance state, and continued in that condition for several days.

The disciples of BRIGHAM YOUNG are making sure headway in Massachusetts. There are three churches in that State where the doctrines of Mormonism are expounded. The one at Boston has sixteen members in good standing.

A young man named THOMAS B. PRATT, made a determined effort to commit suicide on Saturday evening, at Syracuse, because he found some difficulty in procuring employment. He drank an ounce of laudanum at a drug-store, but had his life saved with a stomach-pump.

Miss CARRIE SWEET, of DeKalb County, Michigan, has commenced proceedings against an old bachelor, named DOWNEY, to recover a sum of $15,000 as a recompense for not having fulfilled an engagement to marry her. Under the circumstances Miss CARRIE is likely to prove a very bitter "sweet" to the old gentleman.

The residents of the suburbs of Augusta, Ga., were recently thrown into a state of great alarm by the sudden arrival among them of 150 starving laborers, and had it not been for the promptitude of the Mayor in relieving the hunger of the men, serious consequences would have followed.

An "aspiring" youth at Richmond, Va., was recently forced to the third story of a house by an indignant husband, and so hotly pressed that he was compelled to accept one of two alternatives, either jump through the window or face a six-shooter in the doorway. He went out by the window.

From manuscripts recently discovered, we find that ROBERT FULTON really had ideas of floating batteries propelled by steam. One document, dated at New-London, Jan. 3, 1814, shows that certain models of vessels to carry heavy guns supplied by them had been examined and approved by a special committee composed of United States naval officers.

An inveterate joker at Boston, not long since, had the satisfaction of seeing a colored man almost burst a blood vessel in an attempt to beat a white man who had just blown 3,500 cubic inches on a "lung tester" which had been improvised for the occasion, and consisted of a cigar box, paper dial, tin indicator, and India rubber tube.

Miss CAROLINE WOOD, of Douglas County, Iowa, has been proving to her male friends in that region that women can work farms, and make money without the aid of men. She has succeeded in bringing 160 acres of wild prairie land into a splendid state of cultivation. She has planted nearly 300 fruit and 4,000 maple trees with her own hands. Being still in a state of single blessedness, the prosperous condition of this young lady's farm is thus accounted for.

A sharp Alderman, in this State, a few days since, desiring to have a pile of heavy stones removed, made promises of having lost a valuable diamond ring that had been given to him by a lady. He offered a reward of $10 for the recovery of the jewel, and soon had the pleasure of seeing the job accomplished to his satisfaction. Failing to discover the ring, as a matter of course, the men could look for no remuneration.

JOHN F. BROWN, a resident of the "Divorce State," has commenced an action against a man named JACOB H. BUMGARDNER, to recover $5,000 damages for injury done to, having deprived the said BROWN of the affection of his wife. It is not long since a similar suit against a Mr. ALFRED GAY for $7,000 was dismissed. Mr. BROWN is somewhat of an "eccentric," and takes this means of proving how far a woman may be trusted in Indiana.

SAMUEL T. POORMAN, a resident of Chicago, Ill., recently commenced an action for slander against a man named CHARLES A. ANDREW, laying his damages at $5,000. The testimony failed to prove more against the "Many" Arkansaw than that he had dared his adversary to a breach of the peace. All the circumstances of the case go to show that, if Mr. POORMAN persists in such litigation, he is likely to come day become as poverty-stricken as his name seems to indicate.

ENGLISH ERIE STOCKHOLDERS.

Mr. Burt's Report on His Return to England—What He Encountered There and What He Accomplished—His Conclusions on the Conduct of Erie.

The following is a summary of Mr. BURT's report to the Erie Shareholders' Protection Committee, of London, on his return from this country:

The Committee instructed me to go to New-York to represent them and their constituents, the English shareholders in the Erie Company, to ascertain the actual and legal position of the Company, and the rights of the shareholders with respect to the various stocks; to protect, if need be, the transfer of the stock certificates as now held, and if so advised, to take legal proceedings in the United States Federal Court against the Directors to compel an accounting for the enormous sums received by them on the issues of stocks and convertible bonds, and to obtain, if possible, the faithful application of the same. I reached New-York on the 19th February, and on the same day learned that the first batch of 15,000 shares sent over by the Committee for registration in the names of Messrs. HEATH and RAPHAEL had, on the 8th February, been presented at the Erie Company's office for transfer, and that the transfer had been refused by order of the directors. The next day the transfer office was closed without notice or explanation, but in reply to a letter inquiring the reason of the refusal to transfer the shares, Mr. JAY GOULD wrote, on the 7th February, that the transfer office had been closed for the purpose of writing up arrears. On the 19th March I obtained a copy of a bill filed on the 28th February in the Supreme (State) Court by one JOHN NUGE against the Company and Messrs. HEATH and RAPHAEL, alleging that the plaintiff was a holder of preferred shares; that the act of 1855, obtained by the Directors from the New-York Legislature, and by which they had classified shareholders, so that one-fifth only were to go out of office each year, was unconstitutional; that HEATH and RAPHAEL were unlawfully confederating with others in London to procure the stamping and registration of shares in their names to get themselves and their nominees elected upon the direction against the wishes of the bona fide stockholders, and by means of the Classification act, to keep themselves in power, and as great confusion would be created if the transfers to HEATH and RAPHAEL were permitted, they not being the real owners of the shares, the bill prayed an injunction against such transfers, and that, until judgment should be given in the suit, the Company should be restrained from opening the transfer-books for any transfers whatever. A vague affidavit of the plaintiff in support of the bill having been sworn, as a mere application was made on 1st March to Judge BARNARD, who immediately granted the injunction as prayed, and it was served on the Erie Company. There can be no question that this suit is prosecuted in collusion with the Erie Directors, and, with the view, not only to stop the transfers, but to prevent the shareholders from having their legal remedy against the Company for refusing to make the transfers. Notice was given for an application on the part of Messrs. HEATH and RAPHAEL to dissolve the injunction of 1st March, and affidavits filed in support, and the motion was appointed to come on before Judge BRADY, on the 19th April. On various pretexts the plaintiff succeeded in delaying the hearing, ultimately the case was postponed until the 2d May, on which day Judge CARDOZO would in due course be the Judge to try the case. Accordingly, Judge CARDOZO, on the 2d and 3d May, heard the motion, and the affidavits and arguments of counsel, and reserved his judgment, and has reserved it up to the present time, although I several times urged by our counsel to give his decision. A similar motion in the Court of Chancery in England would have been heard and decided in two hours. The shares presented for transfer to HEATH and RAPHAEL are not marked in any special manner, and do not differ from other shares of the Company.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE DIRECTORS.

A few days after landing, I was informed, through one of the Counsel of the Erie Company, with whom I had a slight acquaintance, that Mr. JAY GOULD would like to meet me, and intimations were made that I might obtain an arrangement by which the English shareholders should have the appointment of a certain number of the Directors, and an examination of the accounts, &c. I, at first, declined the meeting, until, as a pledge of bona fides, the transfer of shares to HEATH and RAPHAEL was registered. The promised meeting was urged upon me, and I was assured that it would lead to the transfer being made. I therefore met Mr. GOULD, and discussed the state of the Company with him for some time, and, on his invitation, told him that if the shares were transferred forthwith, and the English shareholders were permitted to appoint such a proportion of the directors as would secure a substantial clearance of the management, and if I could examine the accounts, and should see that, as stated by Mr. GOULD, there had been no improper appropriations of the Company's funds by the present directors, I should recommend the Committee not to examine too closely the past transactions and expenditures, and avoid legal proceedings if possible. Mr. GOULD expressed general satisfaction at these suggestions, told me the Company was financially in a satisfactory condition, and that they had securities in hand for $5,000,000, and left me, saying he would consult his colleagues, and appointed to meet me again the next day. Mr. GOULD, however, did not attend the appointment, but sent one of the Company's lawyers in his place with a frivolous excuse for not continuing the discussion. Several meetings took place between this gentleman and myself, and terms were named between us which it was stated would be acceptable to the Directors. I reported the negotiation to the Committee in London, they agreed to the terms, subject to a stipulation, that two of the new Directors should be appointed on the Executive Committee, and this was communicated to Mr. GOULD. I was unable, however, to bring the matter to any definitive conclusion, or get any distinct proposal or agreement by anyone on behalf of the Directors, and from the first I suspected, the negotiation came to nothing. I am satisfied that it was originated by Mr. GOULD only with a view to delay my action in other directions, and to entangle me in admissions to be subsequently used against me. Mr. GOULD and I had agreed that our first discussion should be confined entirely to the matters between the London Committee and their advisers, but at the hearing before the Senate Committee at Albany, Mr. GOULD broke this engagement, and moreover grossly misrepresented what had taken place. I applied for an inspection of the Company's share register, but was refused, and it was only after many applications that I obtained a copy of the by-laws of the Company.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE FEDERAL COURT.

Finding that there was no prospect of any satisfactory arrangement with the directors, I took the first opportunity of advising with Messrs. EVARTS, SOUTHMAYD and CHOATE, and other lawyers of eminence, as to proceeding against GOULD, FISK and LANE in the Federal Court. After considerable difficulty and labor the necessary materials were obtained, and the complaint prepared and carefully settled. It was filed on the 6th of April, and immediately served upon the Company and GOULD and FISK, Mr. LANE being then in Europe. (He has since returned to New-York, and has, I believe, now been served.) The chief objects of the bill, copies of which have been circulated in England, are to obtain an accounting, by Messrs. GOULD, FISK and LANE, for the vast issues of bonds and stock since they became managers, and a judicial inquiry into the various branches of trust committed to them with respect to those issues, the purchase of the Open-house, the payments to Mr. VANDERBILT of $1,000,000, and large bonuses to other persons to stifle legal proceedings, &c., &c., and to compel the refunding to the Company of all moneys improperly appropriated, misapplied, wasted and lost by the directors, and to procure their removal from office. The defendants' answer to the bill was due early in June, but the defendants' counsel obtained an order from Judge NELSON, giving them further time until the 8th of September next, when the Court will resume their sessions. I was advised by the able lawyers who have charge of these proceedings for the Committee, that there is every reason to believe that if, vigorously prosecuted, decrees will be ultimately obtained in the main objects of the bill, but that there may be considerable delay in bringing matters to a conclusion. The complexity and number of the charges to be investigated, and the unscrupulous and determined efforts of the defendants to prevent any inquiry into their conduct, will probably occasion more than the usual difficulties in the prosecution of such a suit.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

At the time of my arrival in New-York there was a serious split in the Democratic Party in the State; Mr. TWEED, a member of the Senate, and one of the Executive Committee of the Erie Railway, was the leader of the Old Democracy, and Senator GENET of the Young Democracy. The latter, unasked, had brought into the Senate a bill to repeal the Erie Directors' Classification act, and it had been referred to the Railroad Committee, of which Mr. GENET was Chairman. Subsequently a similar bill was introduced into the Assembly by one of the members from New-York City. I was advised that there was a probability of the bill being passed, if the stockholders came forward to support it, and I had many meetings with various members of the Legislature, one of which was attended before the Committees of both Chambers, and stated the case of the English shareholders against the Classification act. Mr. GOULD before the Senate Committee, and Mr. SHEARMAN, one of the Erie counsel, before the Assembly Committee, argued in support of the act; and in both Committees a Mr. CROUCH, a newspaper reporter, was put forward by the Erie directors as the representative of English shareholders, alleged to hold $3,500,000 of the stock, and to be opposed to the action of the English Protection Committee. He refused to give the names of any of the alleged shareholders he represented, and it must be noted as the occasional secretary of Mr. FISK, and appears subsequently to have secured some permanent appointment under the directors. Mr. TWEED having declared his political opponents, and established his party in power more strongly than before, the bill made no progress. I was told by some of the members of the Assembly Committee that a resolution from the preferred stockholders in New-York, (I could find but very few holders of the common stock,) in support of the bill, and obtained the signatures thereto of a large number of eminent merchants and others in the City. Every shareholder I met not connected with the Directors cordially concurred in the efforts being made to repeal the Classification act, and to get a change in the management. Several important bills affecting the Erie Company were brought into the Legislature, some of which have been referred to in the English newspapers. I did what I could to prevent the objectionable ones becoming law. The bill to facilitate the granting of injunctions against corporations, and the appointment of receivers, was passed, and attempts were made to deprive the Committee of the services of some of their counsel by indirect legislative enactment. These, however, failed, because the New-York Bar Association refused to accept the charter to which the clause was attached. The bill was introduced by Mr. WILKIN, a paid agent of the Erie Company, to facilitate the reorganization of railroad companies whose roads and property should be sold by mortgagees or creditors. This bill was said to be intended to apply to the Erie Company, and its provisions were such as would have made it extremely valuable to Messrs. GOULD, FISK and LANE to sell out the property and reorganize the Company without the consent of the stockholders, and in such a way as to cut them off altogether. It was a bill most unjust to the Companies, as it conferred on creditors, whether genuine or otherwise, important powers in excess of those given by their securities, and required all safeguards against collusive sale by creditors on securities of which the stockholders might be utterly ignorant. I applied to the Committee to be heard against this bill, and to the Governor also, in case the bill should come up for his signature. The Committee and the Governor gave me the promise that I should be heard, but whether from the pressure of business or what other reasons I could not learn, the bill was dropped, possibly to be revived in the next session.

REGISTRATION OF SHARES.

When the New-York Stock Exchange required the Erie directors to place their register of shares in the hands of some independent parties, the Farmers' Trust and Loan Company of New-York were appointed to register the Company's shares, and no certificates can be sold or transferred in New-York unless marked by that Company, and signed by its President. The Farmers' Trust Company will not sign certificates submitted to them by shareholders without a previous examination thereof by the Erie Company's clerks, because it is necessary to lodge them at the Erie office for this purpose. A large number of the certificates sent over by the Committee to be transferred to HEATH and RAPHAEL were not marked by the Farmers' Trust Company, and application was made to the Company to examine and verify the certificates in the usual way. The first parcel of about 10,000 shares was duly registered and returned, and the remaining uncertified shares (about 60,000) were left for examination, a receipt being given stating that they were left for registration and not for transfer. Information of the deposit of the share certificates must have been immediately furnished to York, the nominal plaintiff in the suit in the State Court above referred to. A false affidavit was made that the shares had been left for transfer, and that this proceeding was a violation of Judge BARNARD's injunction of 1st March, whereupon NUGE obtained from Judge BARNARD an injunction order against the Erie Company, should appear before him and show cause why they should not be punished for violation of the injunction, and that meantime the shares should not be interfered with. The necessary affidavits were made by myself and others, showing the real facts of the case, and the intrusion of the allegations made by NUGE and Judge BARNARD dissolved the injunction and released the shares. The share certificates are all filled up with the names of Messrs. HEATH & RAPHAEL as transferees, and cannot therefore be registered in other

HOME FOR INEBRIATES.

Some Facts About the Institution—How the Inebriates are Treated—What Classes Drink the Most.

It is an undeniable fact that if the vice of intemperance could be eradicated from society, the stimulus to nearly all the crimes committed on society would go with it. Unfortunately, no such summary method for diminishing the criminal statistics is either probable or possible at present. But all organizations having in view the mitigation of the vice of intemperance or the reformation of its victims deserves the good will of every honest citizen. Such an institution is the "Inebriates' Home for Kings County," located at Fort Hamilton, of which Hon. J. S. T. STRANAHAN is President, and Rev. JOHN WILLETT Superintendent. In his report to the corporation, Mr. WILLET says of the institution and its method of treating inebriates:

"Two years and three months ago the doors of our institution were opened for the reception of such unfortunate inebriates as were anxious to flee from the vice of intoxication and to lead a sober and new life. Ours was the first experiment of the kind ever entered upon either in this country or elsewhere, embracing as it did both males and females, and all classes in society, and extending its benevolent operations to our Courts and prisons. Heretofore the operations of the promoters of sobriety institutions were narrow and contracted, embracing only the male sex, and further, limited to cases where the conditions and surroundings were the most favorable to success.

We hold that there would be just as much consistency in placing like restrictions to the admission of patients to our lunacie asylums. If the theory is correct that inebriety is a disease, and also up a large extent constitutional and hereditary, as the advanced developments of medical science attest, it follows that all confirmed and habitual drunkards should be cared for by the State.

We are pleased to observe that other kindred institutions are following in our wake and opening their doors to all classes. Their success and ours, will alike depend upon the medical treatment, in connection with the moral, social and religious influences by which we surround our patients. Inebriety has been once compared to schools, that "good schools mean good schoolmasters." Concerning some once benevolent and popular institutions, it may be truly said, there is nothing left of them but the name. With the necessary appliances, locks, bars and bolts at command, it is easy to retain an inebriate in a place of confinement for any given length of time, but restraints which in his judgment are vindictive, coupled with the intensity of his agony in consequence of being deprived of liquor, will only tend to repel him from co-operating in the work of reformation. He needs all the sympathy and kindness which the most benevolent heart can command. We would not tolerate a dog, much less an officer about the institution, who would snarl at a patient. The first aim must be to make him feel that we regard him as a man and a brother, and it is only because we find him wounded and sick and sore that we tender our services. Impressed with this conviction, we have gained the confidence and the rest is comparatively easy. Laboring under considerable disadvantage so far as accommodation is concerned, we could not have held our free patients together on any other system of treatment. Occasionally we meet with unruly ones, who are sent to us from the rounds of all the institutions of the United States, believing that the world owes them a living. When they find that neither vice nor idleness are tolerated at the House, they depart, and under the pretext of accumulated wrongs, endeavor to excite public sympathy.

Among other interesting statistics furnished in this report are those showing the occupations of the patients, and showing that among males the clerks and among females, domestics are the classes most given to drink. The occupations of the patients were as follows, viz.:

Males.—Advertising agent, 1; artists, 4; bakers, 2; book-keepers, 5; brokers, 8; blacksmiths, 8; boiler-maker, 1; builder, 1; clerks, 40; cabinet-maker, 1; carpenters, 7; druggists, 2; dyer, 1; draughtsman, 1; editors and reporters, 4; gardeners, 2; glass-blowers, 1; hatter, 1; hostler, 1; lawyers, 4; laborers, 8; lighterman, 1; machinist, 1; musician, 1; mason, 1; marble-cutter, 1; merchants, 5; printers, 10; painters, 3; photographer, 1; plate printer, 1; porter, 1; shoemakers, 8; seamen, 5; saddler, 1; ship-chandler, 1; tool-makers, 3; tailors, 4; tanner, 1; upholsterer, 1; wool-spinner, 1; watchmaker, 1; no occupation, 3.

Females.—Book-sewer, 1; domestics, 26; dressmakers, 5; seamstresses, 9; gold burnishers, 2; laundresses, 2; tailoress, 1; weaver, 1; no occupation, 0.

The whole number of patients treated in the Home since the opening on Oct. 10, 1867, is 422. The report is an interesting one, and shows what an immense amount of good even an institution when well organized and liberally endowed, can do. It is hoped before long that larger buildings will be erected, and accommodations thus provided for all who may be sent to the "Home for Inebriates."

A Thankless Child—A Wealthy Youth Unwilling to Support his Aged Father.

Before his departure for Europe Judge BEDFORD made an order directing one JAMES CORVAN, a well-to-do young man, engaged in the plumbing business up town, to pay seven dollars per week toward the support of his aged father, PHILIP CORVAN, who is now in his sixty-fourth year, and is unable to engage in active mental or physical exertion. Yesterday an application was made by the counsel of the young man to have this order vacated.

Affidavits were read to show that the father was only fifty-six years old; that he was robust and capable of earning light labor; that such labor had been offered to him, and that being of dissolute manners he scouted the idea of working for a living. W. H. BOOKSTAVER, appearing for the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, to whom old Mr. CORVAN first applied for relief, in opposition to the application submitted an affidavit to the effect that Mr. CORVAN was feeble and unable to work, and also an affidavit of a Presbyterian minister to show his good character. Although the son is rich enough to afford himself a carriage and like luxuries, he has repeatedly endeavored to have the order of the Court vacated and thereby evade the trifling tribute to the small contribution of $7 per week toward his father's support. Counsel further said that the son procured the money with which he established himself in business from his father by fraud and intrigue. Judge BEDFORD denied the son's application, and caused the counsel for the father to inform the Court of any refusal to comply promptly with the order of the Court, and he would commit the son for contempt of Court, and fine him $250.

A Bogus Dictionary Buyer—New Way of Making Money.

JOHN VAN ARPEN was yesterday committed for trial by Justice SHANDLEY, at the Tombs, for an ingenious larceny by trick and device, whereby he has, during the past month, defrauded several down-town book-sellers out of property to the value of over $200. VAN ARPEN would go to the different stores and order at each a copy of WEBSTER'S Dictionary, requesting the proprietor to send a boy with him to the City Hall, Board of Public Works, Courts-house, or some other public building, to get the money. When the boy would reach the premises, VAN ARPEN would take the book and tell the boy to wait till he came back, and then disappear by some other door or exit. Several complainants appeared at Court, and the prisoner was held for trial on one charge, of obtaining a Dictionary from WILLIAM L. ALLISTON, No. 126 Nassau-street, the other complainants to appear as witnesses.

Sailors' Homes in this City.

The Sailors' Magazine & Seamen's Friend, for August, contains a great deal of useful information for the men who go down to the sea in ships. Among other things noted is the prosperity of the "Homes," in Cherry and Thompson streets, in this City. The Sailor's Home, at No. 190 Cherry-street—of which Mr. FREDERICK ALEXANDER is Superintendent, is spoken of as very successful. The Home has been in operation twenty-eight years. The whole number of boarders has been 75,716. The number of boarders during the last year has been 1,678, an increase of 712 over the previous year. These have deposited $39,345 with the keeper for safe keeping, $6,990 of which has been placed in savings banks, and $5,173 sent to relatives at home. Of these boarders, 917 have shipped without advance wages, 44 were sent to the hospital, and 11 shipwrecked and destitute have been relieved. The Saturday evening prayer-meetings for sailors have been well attended, and much religious interest manifested. A number have gone to sea with a new hope in Christ. This new Home, during the twenty-eight years of its existence, has cared for seamen and their families over one million and a half of dollars, nearly double the amount received in the first twelve months after the same time for the support of all its operations.

The Colored Sailor's Home, No. 128 Thompson-street, of which Mr. Wm. H. ROWLES is superintendent, is likewise alluded to as a thrifty establishment. The whole number received into this Home since 1850 has been 16,662, including 90 during the last year. Of the last number, twenty-nine were shipwrecked and destitute, and relieved, at an expense, of $242.28. Among the boarders of the last year have been four captains, eight second mates and six mates. The brig Curlew, partly owned by colored men, sailed from this port for Natal, on her second voyage for Africa; captain and crew all colored men, but free, and since, citizens. Ten thousand dollars have been saved to seamen by this Home during the last year. A larger and better Home is greatly needed.

THE QUARANTINE TROUBLES.

Another Order from the Treasury Department—The Views of the Collector Sustained.

Yesterday the following order was received by Collector SMITH from Washington:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, SECRETARY'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Aug. 1, 1870.

SIR: It having been referred back to the opinion of this Department to depend upon the question whether or not the Collector of the Customs should examine several of the baggage or merchandise on board vessels arriving at the port of New-York which are detained at Quarantine by the Health Officer, and the State authorities, I have to say that the Collector of Customs is to see that the law, and only persons who can make good bond of merchandise arising at the port for the purpose of unloading the same.

Whenever, thereafter, the Health Officer shall grant the proper certificate freeing goods from further quarantine restrictions, it is the duty of the Collector, under the foregoing which he is at all times has, to remove the goods in lighters subject to his control.

In this connection I beg leave to refer you to the second section of the act of Feb. 25, 1799, entitled "An act respecting quarantine and Health laws."

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary.

Mr. THOMAS MURRAY, Collector of Customs.

The section above referred to is as follows:

SECTION 2. That when by the Health laws of any State or by the rules and regulations established thereto, any vessel arriving within a collection district of such State, shall be prohibited from coming to the place of her destination, or permitted to perform quarantine, discharge cargo or land vessel shall or may be unladen at some other place within or near to such district, the Collector authorized thereto by the report to him of the health officer or other officer duly appointed to visit such vessels, may grant the special warrant or permits for the unlading and discharge thereof, under the care of the surveyor, or of one or more inspectors, as the case may require, which Health laws shall permit, and upon the conditions and restrictions which shall be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, or which such collector may, for the case, reasonably judge expedient for the security of the public revenue: Provided, That in every such case all the articles of the cargo so to be unladen, shall be deposited at the risk of the parties concerned therein, in such public or other places as the Secretary of the Treasury, the collector shall designate, there to remain under the joint custody of such collector and of the owner or owners, master, or other person having charge of such vessel, or their agents, shall be entirely taken or discharged; and until the goods, wares or merchandise which shall be so deposited may be safely removed without contravening such Health laws and regulations as may be in force, they shall be allowed, the collector having charge of such goods, wares or merchandise, may grant permits to the respective owners or consignees, their factors or agents to receive all goods, wares or merchandise, which shall be entered, and whereof the duties accruing shall be paid or secured according to law, upon the payment by them of a reasonable rate of storage; which shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury for all public warehouses and wharves.

It will be seen that the views expressed in the above order of the Treasury Department are precisely those entertained by Collector GRINNELL at the time this controversy first arose. The Collector, it will be remembered, claimed that he had the right, under the law, to take charge of merchandise immediately upon its being released by the Health Officer and passed over the side of the vessel. He further claimed that merchants had a right to send their own lighters to discharge the vessel instead of employing the lighters of the Quarantine authorities.

The Health Officer, however, interposed so many objections to such a course on the part of the Collector and the importers that he and they were compelled to abandon their position, and then commenced the controversy with the Quarantine Commissioners. Failing to obtain redress from them, the merchants resorted to the plan of sending their goods to Perth Amboy, and in this were succeeding brilliantly when an order was received, based upon the opinion of the Solicitor of the Treasury, to the effect that the practice of sending ships which were bound to this port to the port of Perth Amboy was contrary to law and must cease.

Upon the receipt of this order Assistant Collector CLINCH expressed the opinion that it was in contravention of the law of 1805, which permitted vessels to leave port within forty-eight hours after entering. This provision was pointed out to Secretary BOUTWELL on Monday, when he was at the Custom-house, and the Secretary immediately telegraphed to Washington respecting it. Though the order has not been rescinded yet, it is probable that it will be, and merchants commenced yesterday to act as if it had been rescinded by ordering the discharge of their vessels at Perth Amboy.

Arrival of Mormon Immigrants—Three Hundred Danes, Swedes and Norwegians Bound for Salt Lake.

Yesterday a party of about 300, who arrived by the steam-ship Minnesota, on Monday took their departure from Castle Garden for Salt Lake to join the Mormon community. They were principally from Denmark, Sweden and Norway, but there was, besides, a considerable sprinkling of English and Welsh. They were a healthy-looking body of people, and, saving the fact that they moved in one body and kept by themselves, there was nothing remarkable in their appearance. Their physiognomy did not indicate a very high order of intellect. There were no more females in the party than is usual on immigrant vessels, and it may be added that they were, for the most part, young and rather good looking. They were pleased at CASTLE GARDEN. Under the direction of Superintendent CASSIDY, every measure was taken to insure the comfort and safety of the new comers.

Warning to Burglars—Twenty Years in State Prison to be their Portion.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Judge BEDFORD presiding, THOMAS HARRIS, a mulatto lad, was arraigned for grand larceny, and pleaded guilty.

Judge BEDFORD, in sentencing the prisoner, said: It appears HARRIS, that you were found concealed in the house No. 125 Fifth-avenue. The Grand Jury, I regret to say, made a mistake in not indicting you for burglary. Had you been indicted for that offence, and convicted, I should sentence you to twenty years in the State Prison. I wish the lawless portion of this community to understand that hereafter both my associate, the Recorder and myself, will hold that any man found concealed in a dwelling-house for burglarious purposes, is there to commit murder, and, on conviction, will be sentenced to twenty years in the State Prison. For the crime of grand larceny, to which you now plead guilty, I shall sentence you to the full extent of the law—five years in the State Prison at Sing Sing.

The Prussians and the War—Germans Going Home.

The office of the North German Consul is visited daily by large numbers of Prussians who have not yet served their time in the army, and are consequently liable for duty. The Consul is sending these men away as fast as he can, and two hundred will go this week. It is optional with them whether to go or stay, but if they do not go home they will forfeit whatever property they may have there, and doubtless will put their friends and relatives to some inconvenience.

CHANGE OF PLACE OF TRIAL.

Ramsay vs. Erie Railway Company.—In this case Mr. Tracy, counsel for plaintiff, made a motion to open default and to vacate an order removing the cause from Delaware to this Court. The motion was denied with costs, Judge BARNARD at the same time remarking that he thought the proceedings before Judge Balcom were regular, and it seemed the intention of both plaintiff and defendants to have this matter disposed of as speedily as possible. He therefore thought the place of trial should be changed to the County of New-York, not only for the convenience of witnesses, but also in order that justice might be done in the premises toward all parties.

A JEWESS NOT TO BE COMPELLED TO A CATHOLIC INSTITUTION.

In re! Annie Goldberg.—The petitioner in this case, a girl of sixteen, was committed to the House of the Good Shepherd for six months, by order of Judge Dowling, on the 22d of July last. The alleged cause of commitment was the voluntary acknowledgment of the girl that she was a prostitute. Mr. A. H. HUMMEL counsel for the petitioner, has his brought before Judge BARNARD on a writ of habeas corpus, and proved for her discharge on the ground that she being a Jewess in religious faith, could not properly be committed to a Catholic institution. The father of the girl was produced, and proved the fact of his daughter's nativity and religious faith. The Court BARNARD ordered her discharge.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—AUG. 2.

Before Judge Loew.

PRACTICE—FRIVOLOUS ANSWER.

Schuldt vs. Feuling vs. Daniel H. Pinckney.—This is a motion for judgment on the ground that the answer is frivolous. The complaint, (very verbose,) alleges that the plaintiff purchased sundry defendants, who were copartners as stock brokers, fifty shares of stock for $6,125 in cash, and advanced on account of said purchase $3,000. That defendants advertised for, solicited the business of the plaintiff, and retained possession of said stock, &c., &c., and refused to deliver it upon demand. That plaintiff tendered to defendants the amount so advanced by them in the purchase and their customary charges, and demanded the delivery of said stocks. That defendants refused to deliver the same, and have converted the same to their own use, whereby plaintiff has sustained damages to the amount of $6,000, for which he demands judgment.

The answer admits all the facts set forth in the complaint, except as to the allegations as to tender made and amount of damages demanded. The denial of the answer in the answer is as follows: "The said defendants also admit that the said plaintiff has alleged that he has duly made a tender of some kind, but they deny that they have any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to whether said tender consisted of such amount as said plaintiff is entitled to, and therefore deny the same, and leave said plaintiff to make such proof thereof as he may be advised." The plaintiff moves on the ground that the answer contains no denial sufficient to raise an issue, and that the allegations contained in the complaint are to be taken as admitted by the defendants, and that upon such admission plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

Judge BARNARD, in rendering judgment on the motion, said: The question between the parties is set forth in the complaint, is not denied by the answer. The plaintiff upon a proper statement of facts is entitled to a transfer of the stock in question. He presents positively that such certificates were issued by the defendants and have been transferred to others. The defendants aver want of knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations of the complaint, and require that such allegations be taken as denied. This is a positive and not a negative averment. (Wetmore vs. Porter, 92 N. Y. NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

Official dispatches received in Paris from Metz announce the capture of Saarbrück yesterday by the French forces. An advance was made at 11 A. M. and the frontier crossed, although the Prussian army was in strong force, the heights overlooking the city were carried, and the artillery placed in position. The fight lasted until 1 P. M., when the town was taken. The valor of the French troops is commented on. NAPOLEON, accompanied by the Prince Imperial, assisted at the operations. The Emperor returned to Metz at 4 P. M. The story about SHERIDAN'S proffered services to France, and their rejection by the Government, is again revived in the Paris Figaro. A correspondent of the London News and another Englishman have been, it is reported, arrested at Metz as spies. A correspondent, writing from Metz to Brussels, says, "A great battle will certainly take place by Monday at the furthest." Immense supplies of bedding and hospital stores are being forwarded by the women of Paris, to the front; 900 medical students have also left for the army. The Catholic element in neutral countries is said to favor France in the coming struggle.

The scenes in Berlin on the departure of King WILLIAM for the front, on Sunday evening, are represented to have been most extraordinary. The enthusiasm was unbounded. The King arrived at Mayence yesterday morning. The reports received of the three army corps on the French frontier are said to have been highly satisfactory. The Deutsche Bank, of Berlin, will resume and disburse subscriptions for sanitary purposes raised in this country. Denmark and Sweden are, it is reported, in perfect accord on the subject of the war. Austria is mobilizing 50,000 men to watch the Bohemian frontiers. Russia indignantly repudiates having any design upon the Danubian provinces. A Florence dispatch states that the announcement of a triple alliance of England, Austria and Italy was premature. The Opinion of that city, says that England, though she remain neutral, declines to enter into engagements with other Powers for the preservation of neutrality. The French chasseurs left Rome on Monday, and the first detachment of troops from that city arrived at Marseilles yesterday. Italy is concentrating troops on the Roman frontier, and will increase the army to the number of 120,000 men. The Government will occupy Rome as soon as the French army has withdrawn.

The early dispatches received from London, bring no important intelligence, and the journals of that city of yesterday morning appeared without a word of news from the rival camps on the Rhine. It is the impression that the arrival of the French fleet in the Baltic alone prevented a movement on Paris on the part of Prussia. There is, it is said, an unwavering assurance of ultimate victory throughout Germany. The presence of the armies on the frontier has given rise in France to apprehensions of a famine, but without reason, as NAPOLEON draws his war supplies from a distance by rail. Recruiting for the marine service is going on actively in England, and the coast defenses are being strengthened. The questions involved in the war were again discussed in both Houses of the British Parliament last night. A full report of the debate is given in our dispatches.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

In the British Parliament, yesterday, the Education and the Census bills were passed in the Lords; in reference to the latter bill, a strong but unsuccessful effort was made on the part of the Bishops to prevent full denominational returns. In the Commons the Under Colonial Secretary stated that the Government would reimburse Jamaica for the seizure of the schooner Le Hare....In Spain, the meeting of the Cortes and the proclamation of amnesty are both postponed, it is said, by reason of the Carlist agitation. The Madrid monarchical Press is severe on the Government for the delay in reassembling the Cortes.

GENERAL.

In a Madrid dispatch it is stated that the Cabinet have recently been debating a note, received from Washington, in which indemnity is demanded for American citizens illegally expelled from Cuba.

A barn of SAMUEL MARTIN, in Bristol, R. I., was destroyed by fire yesterday morning, and WILLIAM A. MARTIN, a son of the owner, is under arrest as the probable incendiary.

The Oriental Powder Mill No. 3, near Gorham, Me., exploded, yesterday, at 9 A. M., and two of the employes so injured that they will most probably recover. The disaster was caused by the clogging of the machinery.

There is no change in the condition of affairs in North Carolina. KIRK still refuses to obey all writs of habeas corpus and the Chief Justice denies all meetings for relief, on the ground that he has already exhausted the power of the Court. Six more citizens of Alamance County have been arrested.

Five hundred Chinese laborers have been engaged to complete the Lewis Tunnel in Virginia, and will arrive at White Sulphur Springs in a few days. The negroes, it is said, look upon the arrangement with aversion.

The difficulty reported yesterday at Grand Junction, Tenn., arose from a fight, on Saturday, in which one JORDAN, a white man, shot a colored man named MILLER through the arm. During the night some men disguised went to MILLER'S house, and, taking him therefrom, whipped him to death. Arrests have been made, and the negroes greatly excited, came into town in a body, armed, as before stated, but for the purpose, they claimed, of aiding in the enforcement of the laws.

Governor BULLOCK, of Georgia, in transmitting the reports of the officers of the State Treasury to the Legislature, yesterday, sends an important message in reference to the State debt. Among other things he recommends the payment in gold, principal and interest, of all obligations incurred prior to the war.

A National Convention of German teachers is at present being held in Louisville, Ky. The opening session took place on Monday. Prof. FELDNER, of Detroit, has been chosen President.

HARRY HAWS, a gambler, of Buffalo, was arrested in that city yesterday morning, for drugging and robbing a farmer named CORNELIUS DEMMING, from the town of Arcade, of $1,300 in currency. HAWS, it is said, was fully identified.

The University of this State met in convocation at Albany yesterday. The Chancellor, Hon. JOHN V. L. PRUYN, presided and delivered the opening address. Interesting papers were read by Rev. Dr. ALDEN, of the State Normal School, and Prof. WILSON, of Cornell University. About sixty members were in attendance.

The American Club attended the races at Long Branch yesterday in a body. Among the members present were many of the prominent office-holders of this City.

A union meeting in favor of the Evangelical Alliance was held at Saratoga on Sunday evening. The presiding officer was Hon. WM. F. ALLEN, of Oswego. Addresses were made by a number of distinguished divines and others.

A fire in Syracuse yesterday morning, which for a time threatened serious damage, destroyed several stores in the business portion of the town. Loss $19,000. Fully insured.

An important order was received at the Custom-house, yesterday, from Washington, respecting the unloading of vessels at Quarantine, and indorsing the views which were held by Collector GRINNELL, that the Collector had exclusive control over all goods on board vessels after they were released by the Health Officer.

The case of EDWARD MONAHAN, the produce dealer of Washington Market, who committed suicide at his residence, No. 276 West Forty-third-street, on Monday last, was partially inquired into yesterday. The testimony of the widow, JANE MONAHAN, showed that the deceased was in an embarrassed condition, having overdrawn his account at the bank, and having his rents coming due, with but $16 to cover all demands. The investigation will be resumed at a future day.

A lawyer in Newark named SAMUEL HAUSER, who has been acting as a pension agent, was yesterday arrested and taken before United States Commissioner WHITEHEAD, on a charge preferred by JULIA BODENSCHALTZ, widow of BERNARD BODENSCHALTZ, formerly a Sergeant in Company D, Thirty-ninth New-Jersey Volunteers, for defrauding her out of pension money due her, he having received $101 20, of which he only gave her $13. He was held to bail in the sum of $1,000.

The bark Argonaut, (North German,) consigned to HERMAN KOOP & Co., loaded with petroleum oil, and anchored off Brimstone Point, Hoboken, caught fire from the ferry-boat James Watts, and was abandoned by Captain and crew. The wrecking and fire steamer John Fuller went alongside at great risk, and succeeded in saving vessel and cargo, and a fleet of vessels anchored near

The War and Our Correspondence.

We place before our readers, this morning, a number of letters received by us from our special correspondents at the seat of war. These letters will be found full of interesting information, some of it tending considerably to render clear the strategic value of the engagement which took place yesterday. When it became evident that the dispute between France and Prussia would lead to war, and some days before war was actually declared, we dispatched special correspondents to all the chief points at which news was likely to be obtained. Considerable difficulties are placed in the way of all correspondents, but it is evident that some of our representatives have contrived to find a way of discharging their duties. We may, while referring to this subject, state that we have succeeded in making arrangements to obtain news relating to any operations of the French fleet.

Our letters today are from the important positions of Metz, the Camp of St. Avold, Strasbourg and Aix-la-Chapelle. By this time we have correspondents at Trèves and Coblentz, and our Paris correspondent, than whom there is no more effective journalist in Europe for organizing work of this kind, has made abundant arrangements for covering every point likely to be involved in the war. It is evident, from the statements contained in our letter from Metz, that it was the right wing of Marshal BAZAINE'S forces, apparently under the command of NAPOLEON in person, which attacked Saarbrück yesterday. The way in which the campaign is likely to be affected by the action yesterday will be found explained elsewhere.

It is evidently the opinion of a large party in the British Parliament that Belgium is in a position of great peril, and in the House of Lords last night Earl RUSSELL made another attempt to elicit a declaration of the intentions of the Government. Earl GRANVILLE, the Foreign Secretary, declined to make any definite statement, and the representatives of the Government in the Lower House pursued a similar course. Considering, however, that the weight of public opinion in England is decidedly adverse to France—chiefly on the ground that she provoked the war—there can be little doubt as to the action of England in case Belgium became seriously menaced. It is important to notice that the statements lately made concerning the military force which Great Britain could place in the field are extremely inaccurate. It is asserted that her army consists of 60,000 men, whereas the total force of the United Kingdom, on a peace footing, consists of 127,936 men, exclusive of nearly 200,000 volunteers. The total strength of the British forces, at home and abroad, again excluding volunteers, is 204,153. Combined with the English fleet, this represents a strength quite adequate to the defense of Belgium, especially considering the circumstances under which France is carrying on the present war. She declares that she has sought no allies, and it seems quite certain that she will find none.

The Capture of Saarbrück.

To appreciate fully the significance of the capture of Saarbrück, it is necessary to recapitulate the details that have been forthcoming during the last fourteen days regarding the movements of the advanced guard of both French and Prussian Armies. At first the Prussian soldiers were steadily pushed forward by the line of railway which crosses the frontier at Saarbrück, and were distributed along the Valley of the River Saar in a line parallel to the French boundary. Saar-louis, Merzig and Saarburg, as well as Saarbrück itself, were thus occupied by strong advanced guards, and the district of which Metz is the centre was apparently marked out for attack. At first the French contented themselves with massing their troops at the great centres of Metz and Strasbourg, but by and by it became obvious that their advanced posts had begun to be pushed forward in the direction of an irregular curve, stretching from both extremities of a bee-line connecting the two great fortresses. Thionville, Sierck, St. Avold and Bitche, all towns within a few miles of the frontier, became occupied by French troops, and their consequent proximity to the Prussians gave rise to the irregular skirmishing which has inaugurated the campaign. In proportion as the French showed a disposition to advance in force to the frontier, the Prussians showed symptoms of retiring upon the great natural boundary of the Rhine, backed by the fortresses of Coblentz, Mayence, and Mannheim.

From an early stage in the campaign it was obvious that Saarbrück was a strategical point of considerable importance, and in the event of the French troops assuming the offensive, would be one of the first points of attack. The formation of a strong camp at St. Avold, which is only seven miles distant, and is connected with it both by road and rail, was a further indication of the probable line of advance, which the placing of an advanced guard at Forbach, midway between the two places, rendered almost a certainty. The importance of the capture of Saarbrück will greatly depend upon the stand which Prussia proposes to make on this side of the Rhine. With Metz as a base of operations, the French have now extended their front to a position which commands the upper extremity of the Valley of the Saar, and renders the entire command of Cis-Rhenish Prussia, dependent upon the possession of Trèves and Saar-louis. The latter fortress is about seven miles lower down the Valley of the Saar, while Trèves is at a distance of forty miles, where that stream joins the Moselle. If, as indicated by our correspondent, the reduction of these strong positions is not to be attempted, a statement which is the more probable since they now contain evidently nothing beyond strong defensive garrisons, and the Emperor elects to march straight upon the Rhine, Coblentz will doubtless be the seat of the next important operation. If Saar-louis is singled out for attack, we shall have the intelligence before many hours are over, and the plan of the campaign will thus in either case be more clearly understood.

New-York Politics in 1870.

It is a matter of great importance that the Republican Convention should be called at a day sufficiently early to enable the party in this City to make those approaches to pacification which are now so essential, and which ought to be arranged by the Convention under the supervision of a special committee. As a general rule, a long interval between the nominations and the election is not advisable, and under existing circumstances, it is doubtful if a long canvass would not be injurious in the interior counties. It is in the City alone that we can expect to operate effectively to overcome the majority cast at the election for Governor, in 1868.

Gov. HOFFMAN was elected by a majority of nearly 28,000, running 18,000 ahead of Mr. SEYMOUR, the candidate for President. In this City alone the Democratic majority for Governor was nearly 70,000, showing a Republican majority in the rest of the State of over 41,000. It is here, therefore, that the party must chiefly address itself to work in the approaching campaign. The settlement of our local factional difficulties must be made promptly, and in obedience to a firm decree of the party at large. The chief necessity for speedy action lies in the fact that only after reconciliation is effected can the campaign be properly organized and fought out. Ordinarily the Republican State Convention is held about the 25th of September—although Mr. GRISWOLD was nominated early in July, 1868—but this year the interval between that time and the day of election would be too brief to accomplish what is absolutely necessary in this City. It is urged with much force that the State Central Committee should designate as early a day as the 1st of September for the meeting of the Convention in Syracuse. This would give sufficient time for the reconstruction of the party in this City, and enable a strong canvass to be organized under the new Federal and State laws, ready to be vigorously entered upon by the 1st of October as usual.

The Republicans of the City and State have been assured that one purpose to be accomplished by the recent redistribution of the Federal patronage in this City was to secure a more vigorous and efficient organization of the party, and to bring every proper means to bear to prevent a repetition of the outrageous frauds which have hitherto been perpetrated in connection with the ballot-box. To succeed in this aim will require at least a month of shrewd and vigorous campaign work. The experience of last year shows how difficult a task it may be. It may drag its slow length along during the whole month of September, although there is no good reason why it should not be disposed of in half that time.

The ticket to be elected this year will include a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Canal Commissioner, and State Prison Inspector. Although there has been, as yet, no active or organized canvassing for any of the nominations, there will be no lack of good and available material. Various candidates for Governor have already been suggested by the Press of the State, embracing thus far, MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, WILLIAM E. DODGE, GEORGE OPDYKE and STEWART L. WOODFORD, of this City; DEWITT C. LITTLEJOHN, of Oswego, and JAMES O. PUTNAM, of Buffalo; LYMAN TREMAINE and GEORGE DAWSON, of Albany; JOHN A. GRISWOLD and JOHN M. FRANCIS, of Troy; WILLIAM A. WHEELER, of Franklin County; THOMAS G. ALVORD, of Syracuse; WILLIAM H. ROBERTSON, of Westchester, and CHARLES STANFORD, of Schenectady. Other names will undoubtedly be brought forward, and among such an array there ought to be no difficulty in selecting a strong candidate. The whole ticket should be selected with a view to harmony and to hearty co-operation in the approaching canvass. No preeminent or offensive partisan of any clique should be nominated. If this course is pursued by the Convention, and it, in addition, the line we have indicated is followed by the Republican managers in this City, there can be no doubt that the twenty-eight thousand fraudulent votes which constituted the Democratic majority for Governor in 1868, can be kept out of the polls, and the Republican ticket elected in November.

Municipal and State Aid to Railroads.

The recent decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan, affirming the unconstitutionality of municipal aid to railroads, and so rendering worthless an enormous amount of securities issued and bought in good faith, operates too unjustly to be allowed to stand without an effort to avert its consequences. Bonds amounting to $1,656,800, issued by municipalities under various Enabling acts, are held by parties who purchased them without a doubt as to their validity—the holders in a majority of cases being persons of small means, or trustees acting in behalf of widows and orphans. These investments the judicial decision renders worthless. Again, bonds amounting to $3,710,975 are in the office of the State Treasurer, having been regularly issued to railroad companies, whose construction, undertaken in reliance upon this form of assistance, is in various stages of progress. Several of the companies have expended large sums in anticipation of the amounts accruing to them, and are stopped and embarrassed by the suddenly declared invalidity of the securities on which they relied. The injustice is as great, though the hardship may not be so severe, in this class of cases, as in those in which the bonds have actually passed into the hands of innocent holders. There are other companies which, though formed in consequence of guaranteed aid, have as yet incurred no expenditure, and to these the decision brings disappointment only, not actual loss.

The equities of the question seem clear. For the regularity of the bond issues is not challenged; they were all approved by the people of the several municipalities, in conformity with the provisions of acts sanctioned by successive Legislatures. The fact that Legislature after Legislature affirmed and reaffirmed the principle involved, and that the practice had been acquiesced in as a matter of course, during a series of years, constituted prima-facie evidence of the validity of the issues. It is not surprising, then, that bonds so sanctioned, and so strictly in conformity with the letter of the law, were taken in good faith by investors, small or large, nor that contractors were able to prosecute important works, in reliance upon municipal promises. Both the investors and the contractors, or companies, are entitled to protection. They have accepted as conclusive the authority of the State, conveyed through its Legislature; and now that statute law and local organic law are declared to be at variance, the State is morally bound to rectify the wrong for which it is directly responsible. There can be no neglect of this duty without dishonor, which in financial matters is the sure forerunner of disaster.

But it is easier to insist that a remedy shall be found than to prescribe a remedy wholly free from troublesome contingencies. A provision in the State Constitution is the stumbling block to be removed. But will its removal meet all the requirements of the case? The submission to the people of an amendment which shall substitute a provision authorizing municipal aid for the provision forbidding that aid, is an essential feature of the work to be performed. But an amendment ratified next November will not legalize securities issued at a time when the Constitution forbade their issue. Neither an amendment nor legislation giving it effect will restore faith in bonds which were unlawful at their respective dates. The suggestion of the Governor, that a change of the constitutional provision shall be followed by a fresh submission of the question of aid to the municipalities concerned, has a sounder look. It involves, in effect, issues of bonds under an amended Constitution, and the exchange of bonds so issued for the bonds now worthless—and thus averts some chance of accidents which attends the other proposition. The objection is, that it leaves the bondholders at the mercy of municipalities, whose temptations may prove too much for their integrity. From this possible source of financial discredit we see no absolute deliverance,—unless, indeed, another Legislature avail itself of an amendment ratified this year, to assume these obligations on the part of the State.

As a general principle, perhaps, State aid is preferable to municipal aid. The latter is undesirable on every ground. There are reasons for legalizing it in Michigan, and there are reasons for recognizing it in this State and elsewhere; but its impolicy remains everywhere the same. It leads to the mischievous multiplication of small railroads, and to the assumption of liabilities by communities that are often more reluctant to redeem promises than to make them. State aid is less objectionable, but it too is bad when it implies an assumption of liabilities that may prohibit our paper from entering Long Branch if we once more express the opinion, which we have urged hundreds of times before, that his manipulations of Erie have done more injury to honest enterprises in this country than he could ever undo if he lived to the age of Methuselah. However, while he can drive his six-in-hands about the streets, with a very questionable company inside his vulgar and garish coaches, he will probably care very little for what he considers the minor points of honor.

Among our European mail news will be found a statement, from a French source, charging Prussia with reviving the use of that most barbarous of all known missiles—the explosive ball. It may be remembered that, at the Convention held last year at St. Petersburg, for the purpose of taking measures to alleviate the horrors of war, the Governments of both France and Prussia gave their adhesion to a resolution whereby the use of explosive balls was expressly disallowed in warfare. But it appears that the Grand Duchy of Baden refused to sign this article of the Convention, and its soldiers being now in the field with Prussia, and in possession of the missiles in question, Prussia has been compelled to resort, in her turn, to their manufacture, and the ghastly catalogue of slaughter is, therefore, in a fair way to be largely increased. This statement is also repeated by the correspondent of the Independance Belge, and Prussia certainly owes it to the civilized world to see that an invention so purely diabolical as the explosive ball should not, by any fault of hers, be brought to swell the horrors of war.

Austria has made the first false step in a direction which may hopelessly entangle her in the present European struggle. She is reported as being engaged in mobilizing 50,000 men on her Bohemian frontier, a proceeding which Prussia has a perfect right to consider as a menace of hostility, and of which she has already demanded an explanation. The Austro-Hungarian Press, as may be seen from our mail news, was unanimous in demanding the strict neutrality of Austria, and in counseling that no pretense of taking up arms should be made. The armed neutrality of Austria, during the Russian war of 1855, cost, according to a competent authority, "thousands of men lost by epidemics, and millions of money, and the result of all this was that Austria spoiled it with both sides." Observers best qualified to judge, seem agreed in thinking that the pro-German feeling in Austria is much the strongest. If so, it may reasonably be presumed that some fears of the intentions of Russia have dictated the present step.

It is satisfactory to find that the dignity and safety of the citizens of the United States, living under foreign Governments, have at last received some sort of vindication. The demand made by our Government for indemnity for American citizens illegally expelled from the Island of Cuba has probably taken the authorities at Havana somewhat by surprise. It is to be hoped that the grounds on which this claim is based are perfectly unquestionable, since a firm and temperate adhesion to it cannot fail to assist in establishing that respect for the rights of our citizens which no one has yet thought of displaying in Cuba.

What will Mr. BOUTWELL say now? What will be said by the host of sapient financiers, who imagined that the enactment of a Funding bill was all that was necessary to effect a large saving under the head of interest? Especially what will those influential European bankers say, who assured Congressional Committees that all Germany and France were waiting, with mouths wide open, in eager expectancy of a four per cent. loan? Here is the German Confederation actually announcing a five per cent. loan at 88, or twelve per cent. below par! The imaginary crowds who for some time past have been represented as waiting for our four per cents. bonds will now, we fear, be hard to find. The Economist of July 23 says: "Of course, American credit is not really affected, but it must long suffer in common with other nations. If the war continues any length of time, the prospect of funding the American debt at a much lower rate of interest, with two such borrowers as France and Germany in the market, must be postponed for a pretty long period."

It appears that there is one newspaper which is not ashamed to identify itself with the Congressional opposition to the registration of foreign-built ships, and with the monopolists' opposition to the free admission of materials entering into ship-building. The Philadelphia American has the exclusive glory of the position. It can, however, scarcely afford to be funny in its argumentation:

"We want commerce. It is absolutely necessary to a rounded national life, and to our own more than most. But it must come by natural growth, and not by hot-bed culture."

This is exactly what the revenue reformers say in regard both to commerce and manufacturing industry. "Hot-bed culture" is bad for both. The monopolists, for whom the American is supposed to speak, hold the opposite theory. They apply "hot-bed culture" to everything. What is the exclusion of foreign-built ships but an attempt by "hot-bed culture" to force into unnatural growth our dead carrying trade? What are extravagant duties upon iron and steel but a part of the system of "hot-bed culture" which dries up the healthy juices of national life to enrich small classes who refuse to be content with the prosperity which "comes by natural growth?"

The determination of Mr. DENNIS MCCARTHY to become a candidate for the third time in the Twenty-third Congressional District, elicits from the Syracuse Journal a vigorous protest against a proceeding which, in its opinion, threatens the unity of the Republican Party in Onondaga and Cortland Counties. The local usage of the party, the Journal insists, is against conferring a third term of Congressional power upon any man. With the two terms for which he has already been elected, Mr. MCCARTHY is told he should be satisfied. Irrespective of this consideration, our contemporary adduces objections which will doubtless have weight in the Nominating Convention. To put the case very mildly, it is objected that Mr. MCCARTHY has been "unwise and unfortunate in the control of his official patronage." Like certain other politicians, he has used patronage for the furtherance of his own aspirations—not for the benefit of the public service or of his party. The result has been party distraction and division, the aggravation of which can be averted only by the nomination of a candidate acceptable to the Republicans of the two counties.

The burning of the Hoboken ferry-boat James Watt was the result, apparently, of an accident which could hardly have been foreseen; but some facts have been ascertained which deserve the attention of all ferry companies. We are told in the published reports that the explosion of gas filled the engine-room in an instant with flames. This proves the existence of a great quantity of combustible material, in the shape of wooden fittings, &c., all of which must have been exceedingly dry and liable to burn rapidly. Is it not possible to employ iron in engine-rooms? Indeed, why cannot our ferry-boats be constructed exclusively of iron? No doubt the Hoboken Company will study the case attentively, and do all it can to prevent similar accidents in future. In the meantime the possibility of such accidents will not increase public confidence in the ferry-boats.

We have often had cause to wish that the whole of our criminal population could be made to pass through Judge BEDFORD'S hands, or those of his associate, Recorder HACKETT. Yesterday the City Judge gave another proof of his capabilities for dealing with the great problem now baffling the Police. A man was found concealed in the house No. 125 Fifth-avenue. By a mistake of the Grand Jury, he was not indicted for burglary—if he had been, Judge BEDFORD would have sent him to the State Prison for twenty years. As it was, he got off with five years. But Judge BEDFORD'S warning to burglars will not be lost on these enterprising persons.

There is a tendency in some quarters to advance the price of articles at retail "on account of the European war." This is nothing but extortion under false pretenses. There is no reason why a single article of domestic consumption should cost more than it did a month ago, and consumers should understand and remember this fact. Great numbers of the working classes of this City suffer hardships enough without being subjected to all kinds of impostures, for which a pretext is sought in the cable telegrams from Europe.

Copper and Nickel Coins as a Legal Tender—Affairs of the First National Bank of New-Orleans—Banking Under the New Currency Law—The Georgia Senate on the November Election—The Colored Cadet Inquiry—The Foreign Mails.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—A great many Postmasters have written here in relation to the disposition that can be made of copper and nickel coins received from postage, but which people do not like to take for change. Inquiry on this point was made of the Secretary of the Treasury by the Postmaster-General; and the Secretary has also received letters on the subject from owners of ferry-boats and others who come into possession of these coin in the regular way of business. A reply from his department says that the nickel cent coins is used under the act of Feb. 21, last, are not legal tender for any amount, but are exchangeable at the mint of the United States, for three and five cent nickle pieces. The one and two cent pieces, authorized by act of April 22, 1864, which comprise the chief portion of the cent coinage in circulation, are a legal tender for any payment not exceeding four cents in amount. The three cent nickle pieces are a legal tender for sixty cents, and the five cent pieces for one dollar. There is no provision of law authorizing the redemption of the one and two cent pieces, but a circular issued by the Secretary directs the redemption of the five cent pieces by the Treasurer and Assistant Treasurers, when presented in sums of not less than $100. It is evident that Congress must soon take some action on this matter. Mr. KNOX'S bill for the revision of the Mint laws, now pending in the Senate, makes proper provision for the redemption of all of these coins.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF NEW-ORLEANS.

The English High Court of Appeals has just made a decision that simplifies the matters with reference to the settlement of the affair of the First National Bank of New Orleans, which broke down three years ago, last Spring. A short time prior to its suspension it drew on the Bank of Liverpool for $300,000. This draft went to protest, and parties interested have been trying to get their claim on the preferred list, so as to receive the full amount. The decision is against them, and the money at stake, therefore, goes into the general assets for pro rata distribution. The New-Orleans Bank is in the hands of a receiver, and will probably pay about fifty cents on a dollar. No dividend has yet been declared, and none is likely to be declared at present. Questions are pending in the Supreme Court, viz.: Whether the Government shall be preferred as a creditor, about a certified check for a large amount that came into the hands of the receiver; and about BEAUREGARD'S railroad, which was turned over as part of the assets. The bank cannot be wound up till these are settled. The receiver is Col. CASE, to whom the Department awards great praise for the service he has rendered.

ACTION OF THE GEORGIA SENATE.

The latest information from Georgia is that its Senate, on Saturday last, after a long and somewhat exciting debate, by vote of 21 to 14, passed the following preamble and resolution against an election in November, which have yet to be acted upon in the lower branch of the Legislature:

Whereas, The constitutional term of the several officers of this State, including that of this General Assembly, is necessarily dependent upon the time when, under the several acts of Congress, the Constitution goes into operation as the paramount law from military influence; and whereas, the act of Congress of July 15, 1870, does not fix said time, and the same cannot be definitely settled until Congress shall decide by the actual admission of our Senators and Representatives; and whereas, it is unwise further to complicate affairs by the election of new officers while the period when the State Government, as such under the Constitution, begins its existence is uncertain; therefore,

Resolved, That the General Assembly so shape its legislation that no election shall be held for the various officers provided for by the Constitution until Congress, by the admission of our Senators and Representatives, or in some other way, shall definitely determine whether the Constitution of this State is held to go into operation as the paramount law in 1868 or in 1870.

THE COLORED CADET QUESTION.

The Court of Inquiry ordered by the Secretary of War to investigate the charge that the colored Cadet SMITH, at West Point, has been badly treated, closed its labors last week, and the record and findings are now in the hands of Secretary BELKNAP. The Court sat without regard to hours, and examined everybody likely to know anything about the matter. The record fills nearly 200 pages of foolscap manuscript, and a copy of it is to be furnished to the House members of the Board of Visitors, who were also ordered to look into the subject. The Secretary will necessarily be some time in reading the papers for his approval or disapproval, but he expects to make the finding of the Court public in ten or twelve days.

THE FIRST BANK FORMED TO ISSUE GOLD NOTES.

The first national bank to issue gold notes, as per the provisions of the recent act of Congress, will be established in Boston, on the application of the banking-house of Messrs. KIDDER, PEABODY & Co., of that city. They will have a capital of $500,000. The necessary papers in the premises will be issued by the Controller of the Currency as soon as the matter can be reached. The only question not settled is that relative to the name of the bank. The Department must of course prepare new notes, and it will probably be three months before the institution gets into operation. Correspondence has been had with other houses in relation to this style of bank, but none have made direct and formal application as yet for the authority.

THE EUROPEAN MAILS.

Pretty much everybody has given up all hope that any arrangement can be made for carrying our mails on the German steamers while the war lasts; and there is nothing in any of the talk about an American line that leads to belief in its establishment at present. All our foreign mails will, therefore, go forward regularly by the English steamers. Some persons think these may in future put up the rates on us, but the Postmaster-General says he will not submit to this, but employ our naval vessels if necessary.

CONSULS RECOGNIZED.

The President has recognized BASIL WAGENER as Consul of Nicaragua, at Baltimore; JOSEPH OTARRIBARLY Y BUCHELI, Consul of Nicaragua at Boston, and FRANCISCO PERRERA, Consul of Bolivia at San Francisco, Cal.

PRE-EMPTION CLAIMS.

Under the recent act of Congress, pre-emption settlers who, prior to July 14, 1870, had filed for unoffered lands, are required to prove and pay for their claims in one year from the passage of the act. Settlers on such lands will hereafter be allowed three months in which to file declarations, and, after that, eighteen months in which to pay for their claims; but after that period, if payment is not made, such claims will be forfeited. The Commissioner of the General Land Office has taken measures to notify all persons interested of this important change in the pre-emption system, and will forward circulars to all the land offices in the country to the above effect without delay.

TREASURY CONTINGENT EXPENSES.

The Chief Clerk of the Treasury Department, today, directed that hereafter no purchases on account of the contingent and other expenses of the Treasury Department will be paid for, unless made by persons duly authorized by him to make the purchase.

THE CASE OF REAL.

Gov. Hoffman's Reasons for not Commuting the Sentence—The Law Must be Vindicated.

The following is the full text of Gov. HOFFMAN'S letter to Ex-Judge STUART, giving his reasons for not commuting the sentence of REAL:

NEWPORT, R. I., Monday Morning, Aug. 1, 1870.

MY DEAR SIR: Since the hearing in Albany on Tuesday last, I have given much reflection to the case of REAL. I have carefully re-examined the evidence taken at the trial, and also all the affidavits and other papers which you submitted to me on Saturday morning. I cannot, consistently with my sense of duty, commute the sentence. The case upon the evidence is a very plain one. SMEDICK was a policeman. On the evening of the 23d of July, 1869, while walking through the street on duty, REAL stepped up to him and, with a revolver, shot him twice—once through the head and once through the body. He died instantly. When Officer MEE attempted an arrest, REAL threatened to shoot him. MEE tried to seize him. He then attempted to escape. When arrested almost immediately afterward, he said he had shot SMEDICK, or, if he had not, that he had tried to. He made substantially the same remark to Police Sergeant MCCONNELL the same evening at the Station-house, and in the presence, also, of ANTHONY J. ALLAIRE. He did not claim then what he has since claimed—that SMEDICK, without provocation, struck at him with his club before he shot him. He gave no excuse. He assigned no reason for his crime. It is now claimed by the prisoner that SMEDICK had for a long time persecuted and abused him, and had on more than one occasion beaten him with a policeman's club. In support of this assertion you have filed with me several ex parte affidavits. SMEDICK is dead. His mouth is closed, and there is no one who feels it a duty to vindicate him against the charge. Assuming it to be true, it does not justify or excuse the prisoner. It shows, however, a motive for his crime, and that he had reason to desire to be revenged. It is not disputed that the last occasion upon which it is said SMEDICK maltreated REAL was about three weeks before REAL shot him; time enough, surely, for the violence of passion to cool, although it seems not enough for the spirit of revenge to disappear. It is now also claimed on the part of the prisoner, and he asserted it the day after the murder, that SMEDICK came up to him on the night in question and struck two blows at his head with a club, whereupon he shot him. The prisoner not only did not assert this on the night of his arrest, but the evidence on the trial plainly contradicts it. You have submitted to me two ex parte affidavits bearing on this point, made since the trial had very recently. The circumstances under which they appear to have been made, and the reasons given why the parties who made them did not appear at the trial, compels me to reject them as unworthy of credit. You point to the recommendation of mercy, made by the jury, when they pronounced their verdict of guilty. I have duly weighed it. I cannot, of course, say what led them to make it, nor can I find anything in the evidence to justify it, or to warrant me in heeding it. You present to me, also, a petition for commutation of sentence, signed by more than five thousand people, together with letters from many men whose opinions I have great respect. All of which have been considered by me. I am well aware how much sympathy for REAL now exists. The murdered man, sent out of the world without a moment's warning, seems to be forgotten. There is no one to speak for him. While thousands ask for mercy for the man who killed him. A large portion of the Press join in the demand; clergy and officials, merchants and bankers, help to swell the list of petitioners. And yet, unless the prisoner's own statements against every reliable witness on the trial are accepted as true, he wantonly, wickedly and deliberately shot down in the public streets a public officer. Those who ask for commutation do not, however, assume official responsibility, and can plead for mercy even against the demands of justice. On the other hand, my responsibility is an awful one. They cannot appreciate it. I realize it solemnly and fully. A life of a fellow-man is in my hands. I need not say to you, whom I have known for so many years, how gladly I would hearken to mercy and spare his life if I could. My judgment, however, tells me that the prisoner was justly convicted of murder, and that the interests of the community demand that he should suffer the penalty. The case presents a clear and distinct issue between law and lawlessness. The law must be vindicated. Tell REAL, therefore, he must die on the day appointed for his execution. Very truly yours,

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

Hon. SYDNEY H. STUART.

Rumored Attempt to Release the Prisoner—His Reported Escape Officially Contradicted—Significant Precautions.

All day yesterday strange stories were in circulation in various parts of the City, that an organized plan had been agreed upon by the who favor JOHN REAL, the murderer, seeking to effect his release from the Tombs in order to secure his escape from the gallows, there being no other apparent chance for the condemned criminal. Rumor had it that several gangs of Bawless men, each numbering one hundred strong, had been formed, and ordered to report at some convenient rendezvous for the purpose of making a bold and desperate assault upon the Tombs prison in order to seize the person of REAL and give him his liberty.

So rapidly did these rumors accumulate that they came from all quarters to Superintendent JOHN JOURDAN, who as usual with him deemed them of sufficient importance to be noticed. He accordingly took action and ordered a reserve force from those precincts adjacent to the 6th to report to Captain THOMAS H. KENNEDY at his station in Franklin street, and the latter officer at once placed a strong cordon of patrolmen around the Tombs prison, who were specially instructed to keep a look-out for any suspicious characters or bodies of men.

About midnight the rumors of the day bore their fruit in the report that JOHN REAL had indeed escaped from the City Prison, and it was generally believed among the night-hawks and gamblers who infest Broadway, near Houston, Spring and Bleecker streets. So widespread was the rumor that a reporter of the TIMES called at the Tombs at 12½ o'clock this morning, and obtained access to Night Warden JOHN OAS through his wicket, when he authoritatively and decidedly denied the report, saying that REAL was asleep in his cell and in custody of Deputy Sheriffs.

Probable Wife Murder in Jersey City—A Horrible Deed.

About 10 o'clock last night the alarming cry of murder echoed through the lonely and obscure streets of the former City of Bergen, and disturbed the equanimity of the quiet citizens just about to seek repose. Capt. FRANCIS, of the Fourth Precinct, with his usual promptness, hurried to the house whence the chilling shriek proceeded, when a horrifying spectacle was presented to his view. A woman about to become a mother, was stretched on the floor, all bruised and battered, the head to exhibit traces. In feeble accents she stated that her husband, named GEO. BURCHEL, had knocked her down, kicked her black and blue, and literally danced and stamped in her chest and abdomen. When he satisfied his fiendish ferocity he escaped through the back door and fled the city. Capt. FRANCIS procured the services of a physician, whose opinion of her recovery is far from assuring. She was gradually sinking at 11 o'clock last night. BURCHEL's sister, who was in the house at the time of the outrage, has likewise absconded.

The North Carolina Troubles—Additional Arrests in Alamance County—The Finances of Georgia—Important Message of Gov. Bullock—Coolie Labor in Virginia.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 2.—The Marshal of the Supreme Court has returned from Yanceyville. Col. KIRK refused to surrender the citizens held in custody. The counsel for the prisoners moved first, for an attachment against KIRK, and second, for a writ to some competent persons to bring in the bodies and call out the power of the county, if necessary. Chief-Justice PIERSON refused both motions, reiterating his former declaration that the power of the Judiciary has been exhausted and that he has no posse comitatus to enforce the writs. Six other citizens of Alamance were arrested yesterday.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 2.—Gov. BULLOCK sent a message to the Legislature, today, transmitting reports of the Controller of the Treasury and of the Treasurer. The Governor recommends the payment, in gold, of the principal and interest of the bonds issued before the war, and a new issue of seven per cent. gold bonds, to fund the currency bonds issued since the war, bearing mortgage on the State road. The bonded debt of the State is $6,014,500, and has not been increased since 1870. The State has salable property valued at over $12,000,000. The message was referred to the Finance Committee of the House with instructions to prepare a bill in accordance with the Governor's recommendation.

GREEN BRIER, White Sulphur Springs, West Va., Aug. 2.—Five hundred Chinamen have been engaged to complete the Lewis tunnel, and will be here in a few days. The colored people look upon the arrangement with much aversion.

Gen. TOOMBS was among the arrivals to-night.

The Ship Island Canal in Louisiana—New-Orleans to Pay Its Bonds—The Republican State Convention—Heavy Swindling Operation.

NEW-ORLEANS, Aug. 2.—The Eighth District Court, today, directed the city authorities to sign $400,000 in bonds for the Ship Island Canal Company, in accordance with an ordinance of the City of Jefferson, passed before the annexation of that place to New-Orleans. An appeal was refused... Gov. WARMOTH and Lieut.-Gov. DUNN were elected delegates to the Republican Convention, which meets on the 18th....GEORGE B. SHUTE, a cotton-buyer, who operated heavily the past season, has decamped, leaving brokers and bankers victims for a large amount.

Extensive Fire in Jeffersonville, Ind.—Loss, $50,000.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 2.—The extensive flour mill of SWIGER & MILLER, at Jeffersonville, Ind., was totally destroyed by fire this morning. 15,000 bushels of wheat and 300 barrels of flour were destroyed.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.

The Difficulty at Grand Junction, Tenn.—The Survivors of the Silver Spray.—Crimes in the State—National Convention of German Teachers at Louisville, Ky.—The Election.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 2.—The Avalanche's Grand Junction special dispatch says the trouble here, yesterday, was caused by a murder committed near that place on Saturday. One JORDAN, a white man, and LEWIS MILLER, colored, had a difficulty, during which MILLER was shot in the arm. MILLER sued out a writ against JORDAN, but in the absence of the Magistrate, the trial did not come off. On Saturday night some men went to MILLER's house, bound him, carried him off about a mile and whipped him to death. An inquest was held next morning, and the evidence implicated W. P. JORDAN, ALLEN, his son-in-law, and JOHN BOWDEN, who were immediately arrested and taken to Grand Junction. The negroes were greatly enraged and flocked to town, armed, as they said, to protect the officers in enforcing the law. A guard was summoned and placed over the prisoners who, after examination, were committed to jail. ....The wounded passengers, by the disaster to the Silver Spray, are now in the hospital and all are doing well. All who are able to travel will leave for their homes by rail this afternoon.... A German named MEYER, a furniture dealer, shot himself in the head at a picnic last night, in Humboldt Park, inflicting a serious wound. Jealousy was the cause. A beautiful meteor was seen at 7½ o'clock, last evening, in the western sky....From papers discovered on the dead body of a man found in Lauderdale County last week, it is now ascertained that the deceased was F. H. CRANE, who kept a billiard saloon in Rochester, N. Y. He was murdered by some person unknown....Mrs. MARTIN, who was shot by the negro desperado, CHARLES WILSON, last Sunday, is somewhat better today, though it is not likely she will recover. WILSON's wife, whom he shot at the same time, will die. WILSON has been tracked to this city, and not arrested up to this time.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 2.—The Convention of German Teachers of the United States opened its session here yesterday. An organization was effected by the election of Prof. FELDERE, of Detroit, President.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 2.—The election in Covington, Ky., yesterday, passed off peaceably. The vote was divided between the Democratic and citizens' candidates. The Democrats elected L. E. BAKER, Mayor, and all the rest of the city and county ticket, except the Marshal, who was elected by the Citizens' Party by sixty majority. In Newport the entire Democratic ticket was elected.

Base-ball—The Red Stockings' Internal Difficulties.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 1.—The game of base-ball between the Cincinnati and Maryland Clubs, resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 25 to 9. The Red Stocking Base-ball Club held a meeting to-night. The Presidents, A. B. CHAMPION, Secretary J. P. JOYCE and Director THOMAS SMITH, resigned. A special meeting will be held two weeks from to-night. The Club is out of debt. The net profits of the last Eastern tour were $7,000. A resolution requesting the withdrawal of the resignations of the President, Secretary and Director was passed.

The Evangelical Alliance—Meeting at Saratoga Springs.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Aug. 2.—A union meeting in favor of the Evangelical Alliance was held in the Baptist Church, Sunday evening. Hon. WM. F. ALLEN, of Oswego, presided, and interesting addresses were made by Rev. Dr. SCHAAF, Rev. Dr. S. J. PRIME, Rev. Mr. BOHEM, a Methodist Minister aged ninety-six years—a contemporary of Bishop ASHBURY—Rev. Dr. T. L. CUYLER, and Rev. Dr. J. P. DURBIN. It was a very interesting meeting.

The State University—Convocation at Albany.

ALBANY, Aug. 2.—The University Convocation of the State met in the Assembly Chamber, today, sixty members being in attendance. The Chancellor, Hon. J. V. L. PRUYN, delivered the opening address. Rev. Dr. ALDEN read a paper on lectures and text-books. Prof. WILSON, of Cornell University, read an elaborate paper on the logic of language and its application in teaching rhetoric and metaphysics.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

SYRACUSE, Aug. 2.—A fire broke out at 1 o'clock this morning, in the business centre of the city, and threatened for a time to be a very disastrous conflagration. The stores of TOWNSEND, GRANT & CO., hardware dealers; ROBT. H. DAVIS, book-seller; MICHAEL TOBIN, tobacconist; MOORE & JOHNSON, hatters, and several others were considerably damaged. The losses on the stocks and building amounts to $1,000 fully insured. The Syracuse House and the valuable property of the heirs of the Townsend estate had a narrow escape.

BOSTON, Aug. 2.—Judge GRAY, of the Supreme Court, today appointed the following persons receivers in the matter of the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad, requiring bail from each in the sum of $50,000. JAS. W. CONVERSE, OTIS NORCROSS, THOS. W. PIERCE, of Boston, GEO. OLIPHANT, of New-York, and GEO. M. BARTHOLOMEW, of Hartford.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 2.—HARVEY HAUS, a gambler, was arrested this morning by Capt. DONOHUE, of Station No. 1, charged with drugging and robbing CHESTER DENNING, a farmer, from Arcade, of $1,200 in currency, and a gold watch. HAUS is fully identified.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—JOHN W. BALDY and WILLIAM H. DUNCAN were placed on trial this morning for an outrage on Miss JARVIS and highway robbery and assault and battery on WILLIAM MOORLEY, on South Broad-street, on the 14th of July. CHRISTOPHER NAILY, implicated in the crime, appeared as witness for the State. Miss JARVIS appeared on the witness-stand and detailed the outrage.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 2.—The race, today, for the $1,000 purse, free to all horses that never beat 2:40, was won by Chestnut Duck. Four heats were trotted. The great race between George Palmer and Lady Thorn, for $4,000, comes off to-morrow. Lady Thorn is the favorite in the pools.

Suspension of the Central Bank of Brooklyn—Cause of the Event—Its Liabilities Likely to be Met.

At 10½ o'clock yesterday morning the Central Bank of Brooklyn suspended payment. The immediate cause of this is said to have been the refusal at its clearing-house, the Marine Bank of New-York, to honor its paper. The, house, however, is supposed to be capable of meeting its liabilities should the requisite time be given by the depositors. A meeting of them will be held this morning to consider that subject. About three weeks ago the books were balanced, and it was found that the assets exceeded the liabilities by $14,000. Of late, it is rumored, the President has been speculating rashly and deeply in Wall-street paper. Shortly after the announcement of the suspension a number of the stockholders made an application to Judge PRATT, in the Supreme Court, and had a receiver appointed in the person of Mr. SPAENDER, cashier of the bank. Its nominal capital is $200,000. The heaviest depositor is the City, which has at present $160,000 in it. COLE & MURPHEY, auctioneers, on Fulton-street, have $14,000; WILHETE JARVIS, proprietor of a saloon next door to the bank, has $9,000; THOMAS MURPHY, of Fulton-street, has $15,000. The Post-office Department has also a considerable account, but the amount has not yet been ascertained. In 1867 a crisis of pretty much the same character was brought on by loose management. The President was Mr. T. PRUYN.

The Sapphic Heard From.

The steamer Russia arrived at this port, yesterday, bringing intelligence that the yacht Sappho, which left Queenstown on the 8th of July had been sighted on Sunday, the 31st ult., in latitude 49° 11', longitude 8° 20'. This would make her within about 170 miles of this City.

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE CITY OF LONDON AND RUSSIA.

The steam-ships City of London, from Liverpool July 21, and Queenstown July 22, and Russia, from Liverpool July 23, and Queenstown July 24, arrived at this port yesterday. They bring four days later news than that brought by the previous arrivals.

An noon on the 23d ult. an explosion took place at Woolwich Arsenal, by which THOMAS BRUNT, foreman at the detonating powder factory, was nearly killed. The work being dangerous, each man worked in a separate shed. One of the sheds blew up, but the others escaped.

A frightful accident occurred at Rendcomb, on the 21st ult., where a scaffolding, erected for a ball-fight, suddenly gave way. Twelve persons were killed and thirty-nine badly wounded, many having broken limbs. The engineer who had been intrusted with the erection of the structure has been arrested.

The emigration from Bremen from 1832 to 1869 comprised 811,418 passengers, and from 1854 to 1869 836,166 passengers, making a total of 1,149,582 from 1832 to 1869. In 1869, 62,810 passengers were transported from Bremen in 208 vessels; 59,840 of these persons were Europeans. 4,886 were citizens of the United States, 80 not described. The destination of 62,762 of the passengers of 1869 was the United States. In the same year, 1869, 12,141 emigrants sailed from Denmark. Of this number six left for Canada, nine for Australia, and all the rest for the United States. By nationality 4,360 belonged to Denmark, 6,514 to Sweden and the remainder to Norway and Germany.

Some American entrepreneurs, says the Pall Mall Gazette, wrote the other day to Mr. SPURGEON to ask him to go to America and lecture. His reply was characteristic: "GENTLEMEN: I am much obliged for your very courteous letter, but you are under a mistake. I am not a lecturer. I now and then give a lecture for some good object, but I do not do it well, and, moreover, have no ambition in that line. I am very glad to preach, but not if there is any charge at the door. Moreover, I have no kind of idea of visiting the States."

The will of Mr. GEORGE [WILLIAM WHISTLER, of the City of New-York, in the United States, but late of Brighton, Sussex, was proved in London under £100,000 personality in England, the executors being his relict, and Mr. WILLIAM E. WORTHEN and his (testator's) nephew, Mr. WILLIAM W. APPLETON, both of New-York. The will is dated April 5, 1867, and a codicil Feb. 24, 1869. The testator directs that his property shall be divided into nine equal parts, and leaves to his wife three of such parts, and one-ninth to each of his children; that his children shall reside in America until they have attained twenty-one; and that his sons receive their education at one of the colleges in that country.

The death is announced in London of Hon. FRANCIS CHARTERIS, eldest son of Lord ELCHO. On the 22d ult. he rose at his usual hour, and gave directions that his breakfast should be prepared. Some time afterward he was missed, and search being made he was found in the apartment to which he had gone, with a terrible wound in the head, apparently inflicted by a bullet from a revolver. The bullet had passed below his right eye, and lodged in his head. His left side became rapidly paralyzed, and he ceased to breathe in the course of the afternoon. The precise circumstances under which the shot was fired are uncertain, but medical opinions afford ground for the supposition that the occurrence was accidental. Mr. CHARTERIS was only twenty-six years of age.

The late Sir R. HARVEY, says the London Times of July 22, was buried yesterday. It is supposed that he had for several weeks contemplated self-destruction. So long since as the middle of March he went to the shop of Mr. JEFFRIES, gunsmith, of Orford-hill, Norwich, and selected a pistol, which he said he wanted to purchase for his son. It was taken to the private door of the Crown Bank, where Sir ROBERT himself received it from the boy who carried it. He afterward brought it back, and several other pistols were subsequently supplied to him, but they did not seem to suit him. Yesterday week, the day on which Sir ROBERT committed the fatal act, he went to Mr. JEFFRIES again, and said he must have a pistol that afternoon. Mr. JEFFRIES handed him a six-chambered central fire revolver. Sir ROBERT said, "That will do; now let's go and shoot it." They went into a back garden, and after Mr. JEFFRIES had fired a shot Sir ROBERT said, "Now let me have one; come you behind me." He fired, but his arm shook so violently that Mr. JEFFRIES had to caution him to be sure and keep the pistol down. He fired a second shot, and then said, "That will do." The pistol was loaded in all the chambers, and Sir ROBERT asked twice, "Are you sure it will go off?" Having been answered in the affirmative, and having also been supplied with some more cartridges, he left the shop, with the words, "Perhaps I shall come to-morrow and let you know how I like it." What followed is already known.

The passengers who shipped at New-York for Bremen, by the North German Lloyd steamship Ocean, which arrived at Southampton on the 20th, landed there, and proceeded to London, preferring to take this course and the chances of getting home by any route that may be open to them, rather than to remain on board the steamer for an indefinite period. The three steamers Main, Neckar and Lessing still belonging to the North German Lloyd, remain in harbor at Southampton. A Plymouth telegram to the London papers of the 23d says the Humburg and American Company's steamer Holsatia, from New-York, has arrived here with 239 passengers, 62 sacks of mails, and 245,000 in specie. All the mails, including those for Hamburg, and the passengers for England and France, have been landed here, with the specie which has been consigned for England. The Holsatia remains here for the present. It is expected that many of her passengers for Hamburg will also land here. The Holsatia experienced foggy weather on the American coast.

Mr. MOTLEY's recall the Cosmopolitan pronounces "a public insult and a personal injury." "Mr. MOTLEY," our contemporary adds, "has been infamously ill-used, both at Vienna and at London. Scarcely has he got well settled in a fine mansion that does credit to the Embassy, and where he has been robbed to the tune of $15,000, when he is ordered to pack, and give place to a gentleman from New-Jersey, whose father once ran on the Clay ticket for the Vice-Presidency. And this is all the public—on this side of the Atlantic at least—know of Mr. FREDERICK THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN."

PREVOST PARADOL.

The News of his Death Received in Europe—His Relations with the French Government—Letter to a Friend in England.

The Pall Mall Gazette, of July 21, says: "A telegram of this morning shocks us with the intelligence that the new French Ambassador at Washington has died by his own hand. The telegram suggests insanity, whether upon any plausible grounds we know not. Waiting the arrival of details we cannot help surmising the wretched end of the eminent French Liberal to be among the first-bitter fruits of this unhappy war. The relations of M. PARADOL to Imperialism as long as Imperialism remained severely absolute and irresponsible, are as well known as they were clearly defined. He was the trenchant yet temperate critic of pretensions that shocked him alike as a politician and patriot. His moderation was his force, and he was an irreconcilable in the best sense of the word, for he was not to be bribed or bought. When the Empire took "Constitutionalism" for its watchword, accepted a Parliamentary Ministry, and professed to give pledges of its sincerity, M. PARADOL, in an evil hour, began to listen to the voice of the charmer. If he were deceived and betrayed, he was deceived in common with a host of distinguished Frenchmen of his own way of thinking, with a number of English journals certainly impartial and usually clear-sighted. No candid man has ventured to impeach M. PARADOL's honesty; he had vindicated it as martyrs to the censorship of the Press, by the self-denial of a career which refused power, pay and place. And we have reason to know that even before he left the French capital for his new post, he had begun bitterly to repent the precipitancy with which he had entered on the course which led to that post. He was more hurt, perhaps, by the friends who blamed his credulity than by the enemies who charged him with discreditable motives. The truth was, the step he had too credulously and good-naturedly taken was soon known to be a public disaster by the moderate Liberal Party, and his last days in his native land were embittered by his having this fact borne in upon him at every turn. He sailed for America heavy at heart, doubt and hampered by regrets. Since then events have been moving fast, doubts have been changed to certainties, and regrets, we fear, to remorse. We need not stop to trace the course of his reflections; it lies so clearly on the surface of things. And as it seems to us we need search no deeper for the cause of the melancholy event, which so many Englishmen will find time to deplore even in stirring days like these.

The same paper of the 23d says: "The motive which led M. PREVOST PARADOL to accept the American Mission, as well as his forebodings in regard to the Emperor's policy, are expressed in a letter which he wrote to an English friend on the eve of his departure for the United States. The following is a translation of that letter, and will be read with painful interest:

PARIS, June, 17, 1870.

MY DEAR FRIEND: I have received your letter, and understand—do not doubt it—the very natural feeling which inspires you. To think of the regrets which my resolution may have caused is more grateful to me than I can say, and you know it as well as myself; but you can also know how strong the reasons are which dictated it. Dear as the France of the last fifteen years of that hard career; I experience none of those sorrows whenever I take up my pen. As to entering into public affairs through the Chamber, I have not the slightest ambition in that path; but what could be hoped after so many futile efforts which had to this respect proved my powerlessness? Not to be discouraged and overwhelmed in the tower, to be a proprietor, on such a scale in this country as to be able to devote 40,000 or 50,000 francs to an object—there are the conditions of success. I can fulfill neither the one nor the other; and must have continued to apply myself with ill-will to the Press while vainly circling round the Chamber. Moreover, if by any possibility I had entered the Chamber, in the present dearth of capable men and with the concentration of power in the Emperor, I could not have escaped the Ministry any more than M. BUFFET, and the separation which is made to-day would have been postponed for only a little while. What, then, was I to do? Live in the country and renounce politics! Certainly that is what my heart would have chosen, but that, too, was out of my power, you know. The part which I have taken, seeing in it the hand-writing of the order of destiny, (for I, too, have my superstitions,) it was time a year before I was done while preparing me for affairs, and keeps me away long enough for the course of events to be settled and determined. Time to the man who knows more than I do, I say only one thing; it is that, whatever it costs me, I could not and could not to do otherwise. To you from my heart,

PREVOST PARADOL.

The French papers unite in paying a tribute of respect to the eminent litterateur who was so great an ornament to their profession; but all of them describe his death as having been caused by the rupture of an aneurism.

MR. DICKENS' WILL.

The Document in the Probate Court—Miss Hogarth in the Will.

From the London Times, July 23.

The will of the late CHARLES DICKENS, which is written in his favorite blue ink on a sheet of letter-paper, has been proved in the Court of Probate by the executor, Mr. JOHN FORSTER, and the executrix, Miss GEORGINA HOGARTH, the sister-in-law of the deceased. It was executed May 12, 1869, and there is a codicil, dated June 2, in the present year. The personalty is sworn under £80,000. He bequeaths 19 guineas to every servant, £1,000 to Miss ELLEN LAWLESS FERNAN, £1,000 to his daughter, Miss KATE DICKENS, besides an annuity of £300 per annum so long as she is unmarried. If she marries the annuity ceases, but in that case she shares with the testator's other children in the provision made for them. He gives to Miss GEORGINA HOGARTH £8,000, and adds:

"I also give to the said GEORGINA HOGARTH all my personal jewelry not hereinafter mentioned, and all the little familiar objects from my dressing-table and my room, and she will know what to do with those things. I also give to the said GEORGINA HOGARTH all my private papers whatsoever and wheresoever, and I leave her my grateful blessing as the best and truest friend man ever had."

He gives to his eldest son, CHARLES, his library of printed books, his engravings and prints, the silver salver presented to him at Birmingham, the silver cup presented to him at Edinburgh, and his shirt-studs, shirt-pins and sleeve-buttons. He leaves £5,000, in trust, the annual income thereupon to be paid to Mrs. DICKENS during her lifetime, the trust fund after her decease to be divided among his children. To Mr. JOHN FORSTER he leaves the gold repeater which was presented to him at Coventry, and such manuscripts of his published works as were in his possession at the time of his decease. He gives to his executor and executrix absolute power over his estate. After having copied the form of words which his legal advisers assured him were necessary, he proceeds:

"I solemnly enjoin my dear children always to remember how much they owe to the said GEORGINA HOGARTH, and never to be wanting in a grateful and affectionate attachment to her, for they know well that she has been through all the stages of their growth and progress their ever useful, self-denying and devoted friend. I desire them to keep in mind the fact that my wife, since our separation by consent, has been in the receipt from me of an annual income of six hundred pounds; while all the great charges of a numerous and expensive family have devolved wholly upon myself. I emphatically direct that I be buried in an inexpensive, unostentatious, and strictly private manner, that no public announcement be made of the time or place of my burial, that not fewer than three nor more than six mourning coaches be employed, and that those who attend my funeral wear no scarf, cloak, black bow, long hatband, or other such revolting absurdity. I direct that my name be inscribed in plain English letters on my tomb without the addition of 'Mr.' or 'Esquire.' I conjure my friends on no account to make me the subject of any monument, memorial, or testimonial whatever. My desire is to be remembered of my country upon my published works, and to the remembrance of my friends upon their experience of me."

By a codicil he leaves his interest in All the Year Round to his son CHARLES.

THE NATHAN TRAGEDY.

The Assassin Yet Undiscovered—Labors and Disappointments of the Police—Facts and Theories—A Possible Clue in a Pair of Ragged Pantaloons—The Coroner's Action.

Absurd theories and sensational stories continue to multiply in connection with the Nathan tragedy much faster than do the chances of apprehension of the murderer. After what has been promulgated it is impossible to say what may not be put forth, and it is scarcely necessary to add that nearly all that has been stated beyond the mere facts of the discovery of the body and its surroundings has little foundation in truth. Very much of that which has been given with regard to marks about the body is totally untrue, like the story of the imprint of a blood-stained hand. There was nothing anywhere about the house which even imagination could construe into such a thing. There were no blood-marks anywhere except immediately about the body on the floor, door-casing and wall, and here there was nothing but smears. The carpet was saturated under and about the body, and there were great smears upon the door-casing and wall nearest to the right leg, which was uncovered and smeared in the same way. None of the marks upon the door and wall were more than two feet above the floor, so that it was obvious none of them could have been made by a man's hand, unless the man was in a prostrate position, but it was the universal opinion among those who examined them most closely that they were caused by Mr. NATHAN himself after his fall, by the spasmodic action of his leg while he was in his death-struggle. Wounds such as he received would not necessarily cause instant death, and it may have been many minutes after he had fallen and been left by the assassin before he died. During that time the blood flowed freely from the numerous wounds, and it may indeed have been that little blood had flowed before he fell. But whatever the facts may have been in this respect, it is absolutely certain and susceptible of indisputable proof that except those immediately about the body and those plainly made by Mr. NATHAN himself after having come to give the alarm, there are no blood-stains anywhere about the house or premises. The tell-tale spot in the yard is as purely imaginary as the marks of the aristocratic hand. The bed a few feet away, was quite spotless, the little room in which the assassin stood when beating Mr. NATHAN in the door-way, was stainless; the door-knobs had no trace of red, and it was this concentration of all signs of the murder immediately about the murdered man, that is the most singular and perplexing of the circumstances of the case. More than one thing else tends to induce the belief that the assassin went away comparatively bloodless, and it utterly confutes the most preposterous of all the sensational stories which have gained currency that the murderer went away with his boots in his hands because they were filled with blood. Where he undoubtedly stood there has never been a drop of blood, and possibly not having upon his whole person enough to fill a thimble, he plainly had none whatever upon his feet, nor judging from the weapon he used, any upon his hands. There is no blood whatever on the end by which he held it and very little at the other with which he struck.

The efforts which have been made to connect Mr. WASHINGTON NATHAN with the crime have resulted undoubtedly in a great addition to the agony of the stricken family, but as yet have been without effect. All that has been lately advanced were among the first possibilities considered and acted on by the officials, but they were speedily found to be impossibilities. The Police, suddenly summoned into a house where they were

THE QUEEN'S CUP.

An Exciting Race Expected on Monday Next—Other Regattas to Follow—Accounts of the America's Victory.

The arrangements for the great race between the American yachts and the English yacht Cambria, on Monday next for the possession of the celebrated Queen's Cup, are now nearly complete, and the contest is expected to be one of the most exciting that has ever taken place in New-York Bay. Nearly all the vessels belonging to the New-York and Atlantic Yacht Clubs fleets will enter for the nautical struggle, and their owners will strive to their utmost to retain the prize won by the America in 1851.

The work of repairing the hull and of coppering the keel of the Cambria will be finished today, after which she will be open for the inspection of visitors at the foot of Tenth-street, East River. She has been newly fitted out with a staysail, mainsail and foresail, and her owner, Mr. ASHBURY, has adopted every measure for increasing the speed of his schooner. His only hope of winning the cup, it is said, lies in the chance of a stiff breeze on the day of the race. Mr. BENNETT has decided not to enter the Dauntless for the cup, but has announced his intention of making another match with the Dauntless. The owners of the yachts Idler, Phantom, Alice, Tidal Wave, Madeline and Tarolinta are also desirous of running against the English craft.

THE FORMER RACE FOR THE QUEEN'S CUP.

At no time since the establishment of the Royal Yacht Club was there such an excitement among its members as occurred on the occasion of this race. Passengers on the London Railroad on that day said that from the moment of leaving Waterloo Road Station until arriving at Cowes, nothing else was talked of by railroad and steam-boat passengers except "the Yankee yacht." A singular unanimity of opinion prevailed as to her qualities. She was able, they said, to outsail "all creation," except that other Yankee, the Maria. Still they hoped, Miss-nomer-like, that "something might turn up" to save the honor of Old England. Every possible criticism was made upon the foreigner. Her speed was only "a trick of build," and she would only win once and then be found out. Besides, she was "so low in the water" that "no room in her;" with a hundred other crumbs of comfort, the very enjoyment of which only served to show how deeply seated was the feeling of utter despair of her being matched, at least for the present. Southampton overflowed with strangers. Wanderers were moving about the streets long after midnight, knocking at impracticable doors, and drawing night-capped heads from the windows, only to receive the unpleasant intelligence that there was no room for them.

Shortly after 9 o'clock, the yachts were at their stations off the Club-house, the America lying conspicuous among them—a strange-looking craft enough, with her long, low, black hull, and thick, stiff-looking rakish masts, not at all the sort of "phantom ship" that FENNIMORE COOPER loved to paint. The following shows the impression she made upon one of the English critics:

"A big boned skeleton she might be called, but no phantom. Here are not the tall, delicate, graceful spars, with cobweb tracery of cordage, conceivable against the gray and threatening evening sky, but hardy stocks, prepared for work, and up to anything that can be put upon them. Her hull is very low; her breadth of beam considerable, and her cleanness of water peculiar—six feet forward and eleven feet aft. Her ballast is stowed in her sides about her water lines; and as she is said to be, nevertheless, deficient in head room below decks, her form before the mast line must be rather curious. She carries no foretopmast, being apparently determined to do all her work with large sheets; and how she can do it this day will probably show before the story of the short and accidental course that she has hitherto run against yachts of the Royal Yacht Squadron."

The following were the yachts entered for the race: The Royal Yacht Squadron Cup, of £100 value, open to yachts belonging to all nations. Course round the Isle of Wight. To start at 10 o'clock. Stations—No. 1 being next Cowes Castle:

1. Beatrice, (schr.,) 181 tons, Sir W. P. Carew, Bart.
2. Volante, (cutter,) 46 tons, J. Ia Cruickie, Esq.
3. Arrow, (cutter,) 84 tons, T. Chamberlayne, Esq.
4. Wyvern, (schr.,) 205 tons, the Duke of Marlborough.
5. Julia, (schr.,) 76 tons, Almon Hill, Esq.
6. Constance, (schr.,) 218 tons, Marquis of Conyngham.
7. Titania, (schr.,) 100 tons, R. Stephenson, Esq., M. P.
8. Gipsey Queen, (schr.,) 160 tons, Sir H. B. Hoghton, Bart.
9. Alarm, (cutter,) 193 tons, Joseph Weld, Esq.
10. Mona, (cutter,) 87 tons, Lord Alfred Paget.
11. America, (schr.,) 170 tons, J. C. Stevens, Esq.
12. Brilliant, (three-mast schr.,) 392 tons, G. H. Acker, Esq.
13. Bacchante, (cutter,) 80 tons, B. H. Jones, Esq.
14. Fresk, (cutter,) 61 tons, W. Carling, Esq.
15. Stella, (cutter,) 65 tons, R. Frankland, Esq.
16. Eclipse, (cutter,) 50 tons, H. S. Fearon, Esq.

18. Aurora, (cutter,) 97 tons, I.O Marchant Rhomas, Esq.

At 9:55 the signal gun to heave short and prepare for starting was fired, and a moment afterward foresails and jibs were run up upon six or seven of the squadron. Within three minutes all were ready but the America. She was not only astern but apparently resolved not to hurry herself. At length the enormous foresail was displayed, and as if to show how expert her crew could be if they liked, her gib, both her fore and aft mainsails and gaff-topsail on her main were spread in an instant, and when the second gun was fired, a little before 10 o'clock, she went away with the rest. The Beatrice led, the Arrow being second, the Volante third, Gipsey Queen fourth, the remainder pretty close together, and the America last. A tight breeze was then blowing from west-south-west. Within the first minute the vast superiority of the America became visible. She began at once to glide up to the fleet, and then to pass one yacht after another, until off Old Castle Point; and before the steamers that were going round to Ventnor had got their passengers on board, she had taken the fourth place, the Volante being first, Arrow second and Beatrice third; and all that could be said for them was that they were delaying her from taking the lead a little longer than the others.

The only question now was whether the cutters could beat her in rounding the island, as she had already beaten the Pearl to windward. As she spun along, an old sea dog observed: "D'ye see that 'ere steamer? I'm blessed if the Yankee don't beat her out of sight around the island;" and the signal-master at the Club-house said to a gentleman who asked for information, "Pshaw, Sir, catch her? You might as well set a bull-dog to catch a hare."

The rest of the story is soon told. The America ran ahead so fast that when she returned to the starting-point, Cowes Castle, the following memorable colloquy took place between the Queen and one of her officers: "Who is first?" said the Queen. "The America." "Who is second?" "Nobody!" The fact is that when the America first appeared no other yacht was in sight.

The Frauds on the Pension Office—Further Developements—Another Member of Congress Implicated.

From the Washington Republican, Aug. 1.

In our issue of Saturday we alluded to the fact that proceedings were about to be instituted against a certain member of Congress who had figured somewhat before the House Committee on Military Affairs in connection with the sale of cadetship investigation. As was no doubt inferred by many, the individual alluded to was RODERICK R. BUTLER, of Tennessee. The circumstance of the case as charged are somewhat as follows: In 1869 Mr. BUTLER was the attorney for procuring a pension for a soldier's widow living at a place in the northwest corner of North Carolina called Horse Creek. The case having been found apparently correct, a check for the back money, amounting to $473, was sent to the Pension Agent at Raleigh, N. C., who in turn forwarded it to BUTLER, at Washington. The check left Raleigh on the 27th of July, was cashed at the banking house of JAY COOKE & Co. on the 29th. The check bore the indorsement of the widow at Horse Creek, and the schedule of time at the Post-office Department shows that nine days was the shortest possible time a letter could go from Raleigh to that place and return to Washington, and a single communication missed twelve days would be required. Suspicion was aroused at the Department, and an investigation showed that the pensioner could not write her name, and, further, that she had not received the money. Before further proceedings were had Mr. BUTLER was called on for an explanation, and he admitted having signed the check, but claimed he had the power of attorney to do so, which he promised to produce, and after a long delay he produced a paper purporting to be a power of attorney from the claimant, and also an affidavit taking back all she had said in her former statements. These two documents, bearing dates at periods widely different, were at first taken by the Pension Office as a satisfactory explanation, and the investigation was suspended. Other charges coming in, the investigation was placed in the hands of another special officer, the former one having left the Bureau; and an examination showed that the two latter documents were written on the same sheet of paper, although there were six months difference in the dates, and that the certificates of the Court attached was affixed by the clerk, who is a son of the enterprising member. This was thought a little too rough for even a member of Congress, and an officer of the Bureau has been dispatched to bring the case before the Courts and sift it to the bottom. The same officer has been ordered to investigate serious charges against JOHN A. WIDPEY, member elect from Georgia, in connection with charges of forgery and fraude upon the Pension Office. Other agents are to be dispatched shortly in another direction in pursuit of equally high game.

The Erie Case—An Attempt to Rescind the Change of Venue.

A motion was made before Judge BARNARD, yesterday, on behalf of Mr. RAMSEY, to vacate an order taken by default, before Judge BALCOM, removing this case from Delhi, in Delaware County, to this county. Counsel applied for the opening of the default, on the ground that due notice had not been served, and that the order had been irregularly obtained. In opposition it was contended that the whole proceedings were regularly conducted, and that application had been before Judge BALCOM, and had hearing of the motion postponed once, and had failed to attend afterward. They also produced an order from Judge BARNARD, staying proceedings, which they failed to serve until default had been taken. The Court denied the motion with costs.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange, yesterday, although the attendance was limited, one sale was effected. ROBERTS & MCGUIRE disposed of a lot and four-story brown-stone front house, the latter 20x100.2, on the north side of Seventy-first-street, twenty feet east of Fourth-avenue, for $21,700. The house is not yet completed, and it will require a large expenditure before this is accomplished. This work is to be done by the purchaser, and the fact being considered, the price realized was a good one. MICHAEL FOWLER and PATRICK MCDONALD were the successful bidders at the sale, and to them the property was struck off.

To-morrow Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER'S sale of lots at Carlstadt, N. J., takes place, and will, without doubt, be attended with success. The sale at this place, by the same firm, last Fall, was a fortunate one in its results, as was also the one held a week or two since of lots at Woodridge, in the immediate vicinity. The lots to be offered to-morrow are advantageously located, and should command the attention of investors.

It is getting to be somewhat of a question as to the exact extent of territory covered by the suburbs of New-York. Although it is a conceded fact that New-York capital and New-York enterprise exercises a controlling influence throughout the whole country, still, in real estate matters it can hardly yet be said that the vicinity of New-York extends to Pennsylvania. Be this as it may, on Thursday, the 18th inst., as will be seen by a reference to our advertising columns, Messrs. LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY will introduce into the State of Pennsylvania the New-York method of disposing of city lots at auction, with all the appliances, such as a free collation and other attractions incident to a sale of this kind. The property to be sold consists of 900 lots and plots situated in the City of Scranton, among the most valuable of any in that section. A more particular reference to this transaction will be made at the day for its consummation approaches.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

E. A. LAWRENCE, Auctioneer.

TO MANUFACTURERS AND OTHERS.

IMPORTANT PEREMPTORY SALE BY AUCTION OF

900 BUILDING LOTS AND PLOTS

IN THE CITY OF SCRANTON, PENN.,

On TUESDAY, the 16th inst., at 10 o'clock, on the premises at Scranton, by

LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY.

Nine hundred beautifully-located building lots, of 25x125, 30x125 and 50x125 feet, by 150 feet deep, and on avenues 80 feet in width, each lot having a back outlet on street 20 feet wide.

These lots form the most beautiful portion of the city, and gradually rising in slope covers hundred feet, giving superb views from each of the blocks of many miles in extent.

For salubrity, beauty of its buildings, width of its streets, and advantages with its business and social departments, Scranton offers rare inducements. From a population of about ten thousand twelve years ago, it now numbers upward of sixty thousand persons.

The mountain stream of large volume crosses the property at an elevation sufficient to supply abundantly all the city with the purest water for domestic or steam purposes.

The particular attention of manufacturers and others is invited to this rare opportunity for profitable investment. Coal can be had for about fifty cents per ton, and raw material and provisions at the lowest figures. Four or five trunk railroads centre here, being only four hours from New-York.

A BOUNTIFUL COLLATION WILL BE SERVED PREVIOUS TO THE SALE.

Terms of sale: half cash, balance on liberal time, if desired, at six per cent. interest. Numerous inducements offered.

Further particulars at sale.

822 OF THE MOST DESIRABLE LOTS

ever offered, will be sold at auction, to the highest bidder, regardless of price,

THE VAN RUIER FARM,

situated almost in the centre of, and on the highest ground in the City, with excellent surroundings; streets all graded, and every lot ready for immediate use, most pleasantly situated for the erection of the coming city. Livingston-av., bounding the farm on the south, and Remsen-av. running near its north easterly line, are each 2ins wide; the neighborhoods of Howard, Talmage, Wards, Lawrence and Fairview are all laid down on the City Map, surveyed, graded, and run through the property.

A volume could easily be written of the advantages of New-Brunswick as a place of residence and business, the Raritan River in the finest agricultural portion of the State, the cost of living is fully twenty per cent. less than in New-York, proximity to adjacent cities, while the connection by rail with the Magnolia is constant every eight daily trains. No place in Westchester County can be so readily reached, and at so low rates of commutation, viz: $60 per annum. New-Brunswick contains a population of 30,000. It is the seat of Rutgers' Female College, at which hundreds of our most popular devices literary, and public men, received their education, within sight of the property to be sold. See also the Rutgers Grammar, county of Chemung and free schools, etc., etc.

The coming sale will afford the best opportunity ever offered to secure lots and plots at reasonable prices, and on easy terms of payment.

Half the purchase money may remain on mortgage. Title unquestionable.

Should the weather prove stormy the sale will take place the next fair day.

LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

SEVEN PER CENT.

Consolidated Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, for the purpose of providing for the payment of its several mortgage debts as they become due, has executed a mortgage to the Union Trust Company, of New-York, as Trustee, upon the whole of its Railroad and branches, payable on the first day of July, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

COUPON BONDS of $1,000 each will be issued, with interest at Seven per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, on the first day of January and July, in each year, and REGISTERED BONDS of $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 each, without coupons, with interest at Seven per centum per annum, payable quarterly, on the first day of January, April, July and October, in each year, principal and interest payable at the office of the Union Trust Company in New-York.

We call the attention of investors especially to this class of REGISTERED BONDS, which, on account of the SECURITY AFFORDED AGAINST LOSS BY ROBBERY, FIRE OR OTHERWISE AND THE PAYMENT OF QUARTERLY INTEREST, offer an investment peculiarly desirable.

A limited amount of these bonds can be purchased at 97½, and accrued interest, upon application to

First Mortgage Bonds

OF THE

ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY Railroad Company,

NOW FOR SALE BY THE UNDERSIGNED.

These are a deposit making first bond, issued only upon a completed road, and bear eight per cent. interest in gold, free from United States tax, payable January and July, in New-York, London or Frankfort, and are free from tax. These bonds are in denominations of $500 and $1,000, coupon or registered, and secured by deed of trust to DANIEL DEGROAT, of New-York, including all descriptions of rolling stock and equipments. This road is 97 miles in length, the largest line of railroad in Kansas, and the only one reaching the city of St. Joseph on the east bank of the Missouri River. Its line is located in the very heart of the richest agricultural region in the State, and is now in successful operation. The gross earnings for the month of June, 1870, were $27,000, and the net earnings are sufficient to pay the interest on this issue of bonds, over once.

$1,500,000

Has already been expended upon this road from Stock Subscriptions and Donations. The Company are entirely free from debt. We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a safe investment, and will furnish pamphlets, maps, and all information.

Price, 97½ and accrued Interest in Currency.

Alabama 8 per Cent. GOLD BONDS,

FREE OF ALL TAXES,

THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

THE SOUTH AND NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD COMPANY,

Guaranteed by the State of Alabama, in American gold, and secured by first mortgage of $20,000 a mile to JAMES BUELL and V. K. STEVENSON, Trustees, which mortgage has been examined and approved by Messrs. EVARTS, SOUTHMAYD & CHOATE, of New-York, upon the road, franchises, depots, lands and other property of every kind, in addition to the indorsement of the State of Alabama, which can only be issued as the road is completed and equipped by the State Engineer as a first-class road and outfit, 90 miles of which have been finished, equipped, and so received.

The State of Alabama, in ordering the indorsement of these Bonds, specially provides for the prompt payment of principal and interest of the same in case the Company should fail to do so.

This is a South and North road from the City of Montgomery, 182 miles long to Decatur, on the Tennessee River, in direct line north by Nashville, Louisville and Cincinnati to Chicago.

The stock paid up and properly mortgaged to secure the payment of the bonds is $3,500,000. Interest is $2,500,000, which, with the indorsement of the State of Alabama, and the high rate of interest, makes THE BEST INVESTMENT NOW O

SAN DOMINGO.

The Annexation Treaty—Profound Impression Produced by the News of its Rejection—Grievous Disappointment of the Dominican People—What President Baez and his Ministers Say About It—Negociations to be Renewed—The State of the Country.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAN DOMINGO CITY, Saturday, July 23, 1870.

The arrival here, a few days ago, of the steamer Tybee from New-York caused the greatest excitement among the population of this place, as it was fully expected that that vessel would bring the news of the ratification or the rejection, by the United States Senate, of the treaty of annexation. The vessel had not been long at her moorings before it became known that the treaty had been rejected. The intelligence spread through the city like wildfire, and all that day, and far into the night, it formed the sole topic of conversation, both in public and private. It is needless to say that the news produced a profound impression on all classes. It was known that there was some danger of the treaty failing to obtain the requisite number of votes, but it was hoped that the investigations which the Dominicans were aware had been ordered by the Senate would result in silencing objections and insuring the success of the measure; and the people found it impossible to persuade themselves that the United States would give their application for admission into the American Republic the cold shoulder. Their disappointment on learning that the treaty had been rejected was consequently very great, and on every hand expressions of the deepest regret at the issue of the affair were to be heard.

THE DOMINICANS NOT DISHEARTENED.

The Dominicans, however, are by no means disheartened at the turn things have taken. It is believed that the best interests of the United States will lead to the final incorporation of San Domingo with the United States. President Baez, so far from being disconcerted at the check which his favorite project has met with, is still hopeful of ultimate success. Alluding to the failure of the United States Senate to ratify in his message to Congress, he concluded with these words: "The measure will nevertheless succeed in the end, for it is a necessity in the progress of humanity, whose unseen agent is Providence itself." In this sentiment the whole intelligence of the Dominican Republic is one with the President, the conviction with all thoughtful men here being that San Domingo is necessary to the United States, and that the only guarantee for the future of this fine country, as a land of equal rights and progressive civilization, will be the presence here in sovereign authority of the Stars and Stripes.

THE NEGOTIATIONS TO BE RENEWED.

Col. Fabens, who was the bearer to this Government of the news of the rejection of the treaty, returns in the Tybee, to the United States, and as Dominican Minister to Washington, he is clothed with full powers to renew negotiations for annexation, and to consent to all such reasonable modifications of the rejected treaty as shall be calculated to facilitate the consummation of the project. The extension of the United States protectorate till the 1st of July, 1871, gives much satisfaction to the Dominicans. It is accepted by them as a solatium for the rejection of the treaty, and as a kind of pledge of the realization of their hopes regarding annexation at no very distant day. Much regret is felt here that President Grant and the chief promoters of the annexation movement around him, should have been subjected to such grievous misrepresentations at the hands of the opponents of the measure, and that their motives should have been so wantonly attacked. Baez and his advisers say that as far as they themselvers are concerned, the aspersions cast upon them in connection with the business have not angered them, because this is the work of men who have had no opportunity of knowing them; but they are grieved beyond measure, they say, that for their sakes such pure, high-minded patriots as President Grant, Col. Babcock, and others, should have had their reputations assailed because of the part they took in actively furthering the scheme for annexation. They are confident, however, that further inquiry and time will amply vindicate both their American friends and themselves in this business.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The United States ship Congress sailed for Key West on the 22d ult. The Nantasket is gone to Calderas Bay, to remain during the Summer season; and the Swatara is to sail hence on the 26th inst. for Samana Bay.....The news brought by the Tybee, that a war between France and Prussia was imminent, when she left New-York, has caused great anxiety here in commercial circles. The foreign trade of San Domingo is principally with Northern Germany, to which large quantities of tobacco, dye-woods, honey, wax, &c., are exported, and should war break out it will injure business here very seriously. Most of our principal mercantile establishments are German houses. At present, however, the country is eminently peaceful and prosperous. Cabral, and his handful of adherents, far away on the Haytian frontier, are now never heard of, and have ceased to give the Government any concern; and the people in the agricultural districts are everywhere addressing themselves steadily to industrial pursuits. This year's tobacco crop is large. The public health is good.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Fat-Melters Again—Interesting Facts as to Mortality and Contagious Diseases—Statistics of Relapsing Fever—Report of Dr. Morris.

The Board of Health met yesterday at the usual hour, President Bosworth in the chair, and Commissioners Ceccarini, Gross, Mullaly and S. Smith present.

A number of permits to melt fresh fat in various parts of the City were granted, subject to restrictions necessary to prevent nuisances and preserve the public health. An application to melt "rough fat" caused a discussion as to the meaning of the term, and it was finally decided that all permits must be to melt fresh fat only in accordance with the ordinance, and the case was referred back to the Sanitary Committee. A large number of persons were refused permits, and a resolution was adopted directing the Secretary to notify them that it was because of the insufficiency of apparatus or the condition or location of the premises, and informing them that by application to the City Sanitary Inspector, they will be informed of the conditions on which permits will be granted. A report on defective drainage was made by the Sanitary Committee, and was referred to the Department of Public Works.

The Register of Records submitted a report showing that the mortality for the week ending July 30 shows a total of sixty-six less deaths than occurred during the previous week, and of the total, eighty-five are attributed to sun-stroke and the direct effect of the heat, making, with the ninety-one reported at the last session, a total of 176 as the casualties of the last heated term. The past week, compared with the corresponding period of 1869, shows an excess of 231 deaths, but the proportion produced by zymotic causes is slightly in favor of the present year. Of the deaths during the past week, one was by Asiatic cholera, and 340 were from summer complaint in children under two years of age.

A large number of bills were reported and ordered to be paid, but one of them, for $85, from a clerk for taking deposition, was referred back to the Finance Committee with a view to making some arrangement by which the taking of depositions can be paid for in gross as a less expensive mode. Finance Committee offered a resolution, which was adopted, directing the Controller be requested to place $20,000 to the credit of the Health Department in the Tenth National Bank.

City Sanitary Inspector Morris submitted the following report:

BUREAU OF SANITARY INSPECTION,
HEALTH DEPARTMENT, No. 301 MOTT-STREET,
NEW-YORK, Aug. 2, 1870.

Rossiter Clark, Esq., Secretary to the Board of the Health Department:

I have the honor to forward for the information of the Board the following statement as to the general sanitary condition of the City for the week ending July 30, 1870:

During the week epidemic diseases during that week there were 11 cases of small-pox reported to this Bureau—making a total of 16 for the month of July. A limited number of cases of small-pox or some of its varieties appear to be nearly always prevalent in so large a City, for so long as persons remain either unvaccinated or unprotected by revaccination, just so long will this subtle poison find victims.

Relapsing fever is rapidly diminishing, there having been but 21 cases reported, against 30 the previous week. Those occurred in Mulberry, Cherry, Roosevelt, Madison and West Fortieth streets, and one, a boy from Cherry, is cooking apprentice on board an Station-house lodgers. By noticing these localities, it will be seen that public and private filth, personal neglect and want are the principal sources of this disease. Hence the necessity, urged and recommended in another communication to the Board upon additional street-cleaning, for more thorough and often repeated cleansing of certain streets in the City.

The experience of the last three months has taught us this fact beyond all question, that in thorough cleansing of streets, disinfection of gutters, in conjunction with the same means applied to tenements, and enforcing Tenement-house law relating to the same and throughout densely-populated districts, has undoubtedly been the great means of saving this City thus far from the usually prevailing epidemics that have occurred heretofore during the Summer months.

As a matter of interest and public record, with reference to relapsing fever, permit me to add a table of the statistics of this disease for the past 13 years as it has occurred in this City, taken from the records of this Bureau:

Ages.	Males.	Females.	Tot.	Per'c'g.
Under 20 years of age....	106	84	200	27.31
From 20 to 50.....	195	215	410	55.97
Fifty and upwards.....	49	33	82	11.14
Not stated.....	26	18	44	5.94
Total.....	376	350	726	1 00

It will be observed by the above table that as regards sexes, the disease seems to attack them nearly alike, while it also appears from this limited statement that under twenty years of age more males than females suffer; while from twenty to fifty years more females than males are attacked, and after the period of fifty years of age the preponderance again reverts to the male sex. It also shows of the whole number, as reported during this limited period, viz., three months, that more than one-half, 55.71 per cent. were of those ages most useful in the body politic, while children seem to be comparatively exempt, they being only 3.45 per cent. of the whole, there having been but twenty-one cases under five years of age, thirteen males and eight females, reported sick of the fever.

The whole number of deaths during this quarter under consideration have amounted to about ten per cent of the whole number reported sick.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

MOREAU MORRIS.

A large number of applications to boil tripe and pig's feet were reported upon adversely by the City Sanitary Inspector, and denied by the Board. A report of the filthy condition of two tenement-houses belonging to Trinity Church was referred to the Board of Police.

Commissioner Mullaly offered a resolution that the salary of the Street-cleaning Inspector be $4,000 per annum, which was referred to the Finance Committee. A resolution by Commissioner S. Smith, requiring physicians to report deaths within twenty-four hours, was referred to the Committee on Law and Ordinances, and the Board then adjourned.

MERRICK CAMP-MEETING.

Gathering of Visitors—Programme of Exercises—Opening Session.

Yesterday morning the steady stream of people which had been setting toward the scene of the camp-meeting at Merrick, L. I., for the last week, increased very materially. Every train, either from the East or the West, brought additional numbers, and at nightfall quite a respectable little village of tents was nestled in the Merrick Woods. At present everything is in confusion; people, trunks, tents, barrels, baskets, bundles, babies, &c., form a promiscuous mass. Every incoming train worse confounds the confusion, by bringing new recruits, each recruit bringing baggage and camp-equipage sufficient for a dozen. During the last few days great improvement has taken place in the grounds. The line of the avenues is more marked, and each tent, as it is reared in its place, adds to the picturesqueness of the scene.

The speakers' stand is finished, and presents an imposing front to the circular plat, a large part of which is occupied by substantial plank seats.

Upon the front circle, facing the central plat, are the following society tents: Freeport; South Second-street, Williamsburg; Rockville Centre; First-street, Brooklyn; Central Church, Williamsburg; Jamaica; Nostrand-avenue, Brooklyn; Bay-Side and Sayville.

Among a large number who have private tents, are Alderman Whiting, David Price and Daniel D. Boyce, of Brooklyn, and Geo. Remsen, of Hempstead.

Rev. George Taylor, of Flushing, is here with a large number of his congregation. Rev. B. M. Adams' church, Williamsburg, is represented by sixteen tents; Rev. S. H. Platt's church, Brooklyn, by twelve tents; Rev. Francis C. Hill's church, Jamaica, by a large number, as is Rev. Mr. Terry's church, Islip.

Among the prominent ministers who will take part in the exercises are the following: Revs. Messrs. McDonald, of the Seventh-avenue Church, Brooklyn; H. King, of the Tarrytown Church; Fletcher, of Pacific-street Church, Brooklyn; Richard Meredith, of Claremont-avenue Church, Brooklyn; Willis, of Seventeenth-street Church, New-York; Cyrus D. Foss, Thirtieth-street, New-York; George Lansing Taylor, South Second-street, Williamsburg.

The following order will be observed in the meetings as far as possible: 8 A. M., prayer-meeting; 10 A. M., preaching; 2 P. M., preaching; 7 P. M., preaching. At 11 P. M. these will be a children's prayer-meeting, and between the preaching-meetings, prayer-meetings in the Society tents.

There will be a volunteer prayer-meeting at 5 A. M.

The bell on the speaker's stand will ring at 6 A. M. for rising and family prayers. At 10 P. M. it will also ring, indicating the closing of the camp, when all are expected to retire and the camp to be silent.

An adequate Policeforce is on the grounds to enforce the rules and protect the camp both night and day.

The opening exercises of the session commenced with the evening meeting last night, at 7 o'clock. Rev. J. B. Merwin, the Presiding Elder of the East New-York Conference, read a portion of the Scriptures—extracts from the one hundred and forty-sixth Psalm and fifteenth chapter of St. John. The first hymn was sung, "O, for a thousand tongues to sing," after which there was prayer. The opening address by the Presiding Elder was listened to with marked attention. Rev. B. M. Adams preached the opening sermon, at the close of which the congregation adjourned to the Society's tents, where prayer-meetings were held.

THE BETHEL MURDER.

Particulars of the Bloody Deed—The Supposed Perpetrator Arrested.

The particulars of the murder committed in Bethel, Sullivan County, on Sunday morning last, are as follows: Early in the evening of the 30th ult., three men were at the hotel of Mr. Pentler, at Bethel—Joseph Cott, the victim, Ira France, and a peddler, whose name is unknown. The latter usually carries with him considerable money, and being an intimate friend of Cott's, has generally stopped at his house, known as the McAllister farm, about half a mile from the hotel. This fact is known to every one in the vicinity, and it is supposed led to the bloody and fatal occurrance. It so happened, however, on this night that the peddler did not stay at Bethel, but went away about 8 o'clock, Cott and he going out together. Cott went home, and about 12½ or 1 o'clock Sunday morning was wakened by a noise in his room, which he soon knew was made by some one striking a match. He raised himself inside bed, when he received a blow in the face from an ax, which severed his nose from his face. This was quickly followed by two other blows, one on the cheek, cutting it open from the forehead to the chin, and breaking the cheek-bone; the other on the back of his neck, inflicting a terrible gash. Cott shouted "murder" when he was struck, which cry was heard by a servant girl, who slept in a room above, and she jumped from the window. The girl says she was followed by the man who was killing Cott, but she hid in corn-field, and he not finding her went back in the house, where she could hear him pounding about the floor with the ax as if trying to strike the old man again, it being too dark for him to see. When the murderer ran out after the girl, Cott, although weak from loss of blood, managed to crawl out of the window and get into a small tree near by. When the girl heard the man go away, which he did shortly after re-entering the house, no doubt fearing the neighbors would be alarmed, she assisted the old man from the tree, and although injured herself by her leap from the second story window, carried him on her back to Dr. Glasby's, who at once took him in charge. He was alive last night, but unconscious. The doctor says he cannot live.

Suspicion rests upon Ira France, as he had been in company with Cott and the peddler the night before, and was not aware that the latter had departed from his usual custom and gone away, and the impression became general that France had entered the house for the purpose of robbing the peddler, and being alarmed had used the ax to silence the person who had discovered him. He was accordingly arrested yesterday morning and examined before a Justice, but nothing definite was elicited he was discharged. This proceeding created great dissatisfaction, and his actions during the day being very suspicious he was again arrested while stalking home by a roundabout way. His coat being removed, his shirt-sleeves were found to be rolled up, but no blood was found upon his person. He was held to await the result of Cott's injuries.

France is a noted desperado, and is but recently out of jail for maltreating his wife, and, it is said, would not hesitate to commit the fearful crime. He has a wife and one child. Cott, the victim, is sixty years old, and is an old stage-driver, having been formerly employed on the Newburg stage line. He was never married, but kept bachelor's hall at the McAllister farm. The neighborhood is greatly excited over the affair, and the feeling against France is general, and there is but little doubt that he is the murderer.

Excursion of the Twenty-Second Regiment Battalion—A Day of Pleasure at Long Branch.

Yesterday the officers and members of Companies A and B, Twenty-second Regiment, assembled at their armory for the purpose of proceeding on an excursion to Long Branch. The excursion battalion was under the command of Capt. Thomas H. Cullen, assisted by Capt R. Kelly Stiles, of Company A. As soon as the line had been formed the command marched down Broadway to the foot of Murray-street, and embarked on board the steamer Jessie Hoyt, and in due time passed over the Jersey Southern Railroad to the Branch. They and their guests, among whom were Ex-Col. Ritmey, Lieut.-Col. Camp, Major Brown and Mr. Weir, the "member from Rye," then proceeded to the Continental Hotel, and after stacking arms enjoyed the luncheon provided for them by Mr. Borrows. The meal over, the boys followed all the rest of the Long Branch people, and without arms or dress-belts embarked on the tram for the races at Monmouth Park, in accordance with an invitation from Mr. Chamberlin. The excursionists were warmly received by the spectators and with Dodworth's Band, which accompanied them, they afforded the visitors in the grand stand some delightful music, in alternation with the programmes of the Seventh Regiment Band, which came with the Americus Club. The races over, the boys returned to Long Branch, and took dinner at the Continental House, after which the ceremony of a dress parade was observed on the lawn in front of the hotel. The review by the President of the United States was omitted, for some reason not explained. The battalion next took the train for Sandy Hook, and came back to the City in the steamer Plymouth Rock, and was duly received by Company C, under Capt. Thos. W. Tate, whose command was largely reinforced by members from other companies. With some final festivities at the armory, the boys closed a day of great enjoyment.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

At a special meeting of the Irish Republican Association of the Third Assembly District, held last evening at No. 275 Broome-street, the following officers were elected: President, Robert Laffan; Secretary, Thomas Leary; Treasurer, James Denton. E. A. Willoughby, Denis Burns and Robert McManus were elected delegates from the Association to the Irish Republican General Committee. The Association now numbers upward of sixty members.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, a large number of criminals, mostly boys from fourteen to twenty years of age, were arraigned and pleaded not guilty to various charges, and were remanded for trial. Max Berliner, a youth of fifteen, pleaded guilty to grand larceny, and was sent to the Penitentiary for three years. Alfred Harris, a colored boy, was tried for picking the pocket of Mrs. Hull on the 19th ult. of $30, and the jury were unable to agree. A horse case has just been decided in Justice Corwin's Court, Riverhead, by a jury, which has excited some comment. The plaintiff and defendant both claim damage, each stating that he had been cheated by the other in trading horses, both claiming that the horse received had the glanders and the one given was sound. The plaintiff claimed a balance of $100, and the defendant thought his damage ought to be $200. The jury thought the story of Mr. J. W. Hallock, the plaintiff, more worthy of credence, and ordered that John R. Corwin, the defendant, should pay $100. Each contestant employed two lawyers, who are not through with the case, as it will probably be appealed.
